5 Little Girls at Once.
Big Bills Come Back.
Only Flew the Atlantic.
Cuba Remembers.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

MRS. OLIVIA DIONNE, of North Bay, Ontario, had six children last Sunday, and "expected" another. Yesterday she had eleven children, her family increased by five girl babies at one birth.

Dr. A. R. Dafoe, of Callander, says:

"The five little girls are all well and chirping."

This will interest millions of women, far more than NRA, the Russian-Japanese complications, or the approaching home-going of Congress.

BILLS OF LARGE denomination, from $50 to $1,000, and $10,000, are used rarely in ordinary affairs.

When banks began closing, and people became frightened, it was observed that bank customers were asking for these big bills in exchange for cheques, and, before long, millions of them disappeared. The Federal Reserve considers it a good sign that they are coming out from hiding.

Just before the bank crisis, the amount of big bills in hiding rose to one billion, nine hundred millions. Of these large bills, three hundred and fifty millions have recently returned to the United States Treasury, and to reserve banks, which, according to the Federal Reserve, indicates "better times."

MR. GREEN, head of the American Federation of Labor, does not seem optimistic about those "better times." He says there are ten million men idle in the United States now, about as many as there were before all the "relief" began.

Whether strikes, labor fights and the determined efforts of labor leaders to "muscle in" where the open shop has hitherto existed, will improve the employment conditions, is for Mr. Green and his associates to decide.

YESTERDAY AFTERNOON the two French fliers, Capt. Maurice Rossi and Lieut. Paul Codos, landed on Long Island after an attempt to fly nonstop from Paris to California, 6,000 miles. The two Frenchmen are said to be greatly humiliated by their inability to fly on and reach California, where a glorious recepton awaited them.

It would seem that flying the Atlantic westward, infinitely more difficult than going the other way, is a sufficient accomplishment, considering that less than twenty-five years ago Lord Northcliffe was offering ten thousand pounds to any man that would fly across the little English Channel.

The day is not far away when men will fly non-stop from Paris to San Francisco as a matter of course, and from anywhere on earth to any other spot on earth.

THE PEOPLE and government of Cuba are trying to find four assassins, accused of attempting to murder Jefferson Caffery, United States Ambassador. The real Cubans, intelligent people, seek no quarrel with the United States. They "remember the Maine," and what happened to Spain after that ship was sent to the bottom. Spain was driven out of Cuba, and all the way home across the Atlantic, and out of the Philippines as well.

HERSBRUCK, NEAR Nuremberg, important, fertile section of the hop-growing country of Franconia, with 22,000 population, raises a Nazi swastika flag to celebrate "the departure of the last Jew from Hersbruck."

Julius Streicher, exulting over this condition in a newspaper article, says stories in foreign newspapers are lies, "not a hair has been turned on a Jew's head," although "the last of the Jews who formerly controlled the entire hop trade has been driven out."

If they will read the history of Spain and Portugal, Herr Streicher and Germany will learn that "driving out" Jews has proved unprofitable. Human beings must learn by experience.

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, wife of the President, an able, energetic and kind-hearted woman, arrived at Alderson, West Virginia, yesterday to inspect the federal prison for women and speak to the 400 inmates. For such an address, or any address to any prisoners, the best text is the well-known remark of the Bohemian John Huss looking at a poor drunkard in the gutter:

"But for the grace of God, there lies John Huss."

Mrs. Roosevelt talks over the radio, and, for doing so, is paid $500 a minute. Others do the same and are paid as much or even more, but Mrs. Roosevelt gives all her radio receipts to charity.

Not many of the others do that.

THE "NEW YORK committee on the use of leisure time" says mental entertainment and mental occupation must be found for the new leisure hours, product of diminished work hours. You can't ask men to go back to the days of craftsmanship, and find happiness in work with their hands, says the committee.

It was hard, probably, in the beginning to make men work. It will be just as hard, in coming days of leisure, to make life interesting without work. There are the public libraries that ought to be crowded, their space multiplied tenfold, but men are not accustomed to reading a "learned style." The good books are too heavy, the others not worth while.

To change from a twelve-hour day to a six-hour day in one generation is sudden. Excess leisure would cease to be a problem, if everybody in the United States had everything he wanted, clothes, shoes, hats, house, automobiles. Production in that case would be doubled, and there would be no excess leisure.

COYNE PLEA TURNED DOWN

Verona, 4 Others Win Directed Acquittal At Vote Trial

BULLETIN.

Binding instructions to acquit Senator James J. Coyne were refused by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker in Federal Court today. After hearing defense arguments thatt he government had not made out a case in its charge that Coyne conspired to steal votes in the November election of 1932, Judge Schoonmaker sadi:

"We will let this go to the jury."

Binding instructions for acquittal of George W. Savage were issued immediately after the Coyne motion was refused.

Acquittal of four of Senator James J. Coyne's co-defendants was ordered in the vote fraud trials in Federal Court today.

Judge F. P. Schoonmaker gave binding instructions for acquittal of John J. Verona, John A. Fugassi, Harry Fink and Louis J. Conley.

The court refused to grant similar instructions in the cases of Patrick J. Maloney and Frank O'Halloran.

The government concurred in the motions to acquit Verona and Fink.

Immediately after these cases were disposed of, Attorney O. K. Eaton began arguments on his motion for binding instructions to acquit Senator Coyne.

Counsed for the defendants argued that Government Prosecutors Louis E. Graham and James I. Marsh failed to prove Coyne and the 11 old-line Republicans conspired to steal votes in the November election of 1932.

PLEA FOR COYNE

Arguing on the motion for instructions to acquit Coyne, Eaton reviewed the testimony and said:

"I would like to ask the court at this time on what principles of law we are to base this case, if we don't start with the presumpttion in mind that the defendant is innocent until proved guilty."

WAITRESSES CALLED

Two waitresses who the government prosecutors didn't know existed 24 hours ago were produced today in Federal Court as surprise witnesses against Senator Coyne and the 11 other Republicans standing trial on charges that they conspired to steal votes in the November election of 1932.

From the Regal Restaurant at Penn and Main streets in Lawrenceville came Mary Ryba and Mrs. Stella Schwartz to testify to telephone calls made in the restaurant sometime after 1 a. m. on the early morning after election.

Previous testimony had brought out Senator Coyne and several other defendants were among the crowd which was gathered on the

MRS. KAYE DON

RACE KING HURT IN SECRET RIDE

International News Service.

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man, May 29.—After being found in a semi-conscious condition by a searching party led by his wife, the former Eileen Martin, of Greenwich, Conn., Kaye Don, famed British racing driver, was recovering today from shock and abrasions suffered in an accident during a secret, midnight test of a new speed car.

Frank Taylor, Don's mechanic, who was in the car with him, died this morning from injuries he received.

Don, idol of the British sports public, and Taylor went out last night to secretly test their entry in an international race to be held Friday. When they failed to return to their hotel here, Don's wife, daughter of Leonard J. Martin, Greenwich "linen king," organized a searching party which she led.

They found the racers lying dazed beside the wreck of their car. Don said they had brushed a private automobile while traveling at a terrific rate and overturned.

SOCIETY GIRL SLAIN AND BURNED

Treasurer's Daughter Victim in Torch Mystery

International News Service.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., May 29.—Her clothing drenched with kerosene and set afire after she apparently had been beaten to death with a cement block, the nearly nude body of Virginia Johnson, beautiful socialite 22-year-old daughter of Charles G. Johnson, California State Treasurer and candidate for Governor, was found in a garage near her home and today a widespread manhunt was in progress.

The girl's body was burned almost beyond recognition and was identified by dental work. Police said she had been attacked.

One youth, said by police to have been a "boy friend" of the murdered girl, was held for questioning as officers investigated his movements.

Miss Johnson left home at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon apparently to take a walk. Two hours later her body was found in the garage by Mrs. C. E. Mahoney, owner of an apartment house as she showed the garage to prospective tenants.

Police worked feverishly to solve the mystery of her death. Just how she was lured or forced into the garage was a puzzling element in the tragedy. Police held one theory that she may have known the murderer.

One clue to the identity of the killer came with the discovery today of two fingerprints on the half-filled gallon jug of kerosene which was used in the "torch murder."

The fingerprints exonerated three young acquaintances of Miss Johnson, a Junior League member and leader in state capital social circles.

District Attorney Neil McAllister ordered questioning of all "boy friends" of the murdered beauty. He said:

"No screams were heard by neighbors. This strengthens the theory that Miss Johnson probably met an acquaintance, who lured her into the vacant garage.

"We are checking every possible theory, however. The girl may have been the victim of a prowler."

Three young men questioned and exonerated by police today were Leonard Titus, 18-year-old Sacramento Junior College student and boarder in an apartment adjoining the murder garage; Robert Meckfessel, 23, former junior college student, and James K. Cogswell, of San Francisco.

Members of Miss Johnson's family said they knew of no love affairs in her life.

Soles Awarded Bulk Of Wife's Estate

Robert S. Soles, of McKeesport, who was tried and acquitted on a charge of murdering his wife, La Roux Lynch Soles, will receive all but $1,046 of her $35,435 estate, under a decree by Judge Thomas P. Trimble, of Orphans Court, issued today.

Ordering distribution of the estate, the decree gives Mrs. Soles' brother, John Harvey Lynch, 20 shares of stock in the First National Bank of McKeesport, valued at $1,046. The distribution is in accordance with the terms of Mrs. Soles' will.

DAVIS URGES ARMS CUT, CONTROL

Soviet for Complete Abolition of War Machines

Developments today in the world's arms crisis:

1—The United States, through Ambassador-at-large Norman H. Davis, offered to join the world in naval reduction and an agreement regulating sales of war materials, at the opening of the International Disarmament Conference in Geneva.

2—Speaking for Soviet Russia, Maxim Litvinoff advocated before the same conference complete abolition of armaments as the only certain method of achieving world piece.

3—Secretary of War Dern told the House Military Affairs Committee in Washington that the present personnel of the United States Army is unsuited for defense. (Story on page 9.)

GENEVA, May 29.—(AP.)—The United States offered the world assistance in the reduction and control of armaments today and Soviet Russia advocated the complete abolition of armaments in proposals made before the International Disarmament Conference.

The American suggestions were made by Norman H. Davis, United States ambassador-at-large. The Russian proposal was made by Maxim Litvinoff, foreign commissar for the Soviet Union.

DAVIS PROPOSALS

Davis said his country was prepared to:

Negotiate a universal pact of non-aggression.

Agree to further reduction in armaments.

Negotiate a treaty for international control and supervision of the manufacture and sale of war munitions.

Join in an agreement for substantial proportionate reductions in naval tonnage.

Davis declared there were only two possible ways for nations to achieve security—(1) by overwhelming superiority in armaments coupled with military and political alliances, and (2) by increasing defense powers and decreasing offensive powers, through gradual abolition of weapons suit-

Japanese Sea Hero Kept Alive by Oxygen

TOKIO, May 29.—(INS.)—After the Japanese newspaper Yomiuri had published an extra edition announcing the death of Admiral Heihachiro Togo, famous naval hero of the Russo-Japanese war today, an official denial of his death was issued by the Navy department.

Injection of oxygen, the Navy department announced, were being continued in an effort to prolong the life of the aged admiral.

Politics vs. Education

ONE OF THE most sinister results of the depression has been the tendency of America to sacrifice the education of its youth in order to maintain useless and worthless politicians on the payroll.

The desperate plight to which public education has been reduced was vividly depicted in a survey recently completed by the Federal Office of Education.

This survey shows that "there never was such a demand for educational opportunity as there is today." It shows also that "because of more children and less money, it has never been so difficult to satisfy that demand."

BECAUSE the spoilsmen of politics are squandering taxes wrung from the people to pay the wages and the waste of hundreds and thousands of unnecessary county and local officeholders, public education is in jeopardy in state after state.

More than two million two hundred and eighty thousand children of school age have been deprived of any schooling during the school year now drawing to a close.

One out of every four cities shortened its school term this year and seven hundred and fifteen rural schools were able to keep open less than three months.

In twenty-four states, two thousand rural schools failed to open. In some communities free public schools have been abandoned altogether and the only children who are getting any education are those whose parents are able to pay the rate demanded.

THE WHOLE progress of America has been based upon its education system.

"On the diffusion of education among the people," said Daniel Webster, "rests the preservation and perpetuation of our free institutions."

As long as we have been the best educated people in the world, we have been the most progressive nation in the world. We must not let other nations pass us by in facilities for education and ardor for education.

We must not let other nations deprive America of that leadership in publication that has long been the pride of the American people and the envy of other peoples.

FURTHERMORE, our nation is a republic.

Our government is popular government.

The fate of our country depends upon the capacity of our citizens for self-government.

And the capacity of our citizens for self-government depends upon the training and the preparation for citizenship that only education can provide.

Education is a primary necessity of good citizenship.

Good citizenship is not merely the wish to gov-

INJUNCTION DENIED BY COURT

Company Upheld in Defiance of NRA; New Fight Looms

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP.)—After a conference with steel labor leaders, Chairman Wagner, of the NRA Labor Board, expressed confidence today that a general strike in the industry could be averted and that the controversy "hinged largely on union recognition."

Labor-steel developments today:

1—The government's plea for a preliminary injunction to restrain Weirton Steel from interfering with election of collective bargaining representatives by its employes was denied in a Federal District Court.

2—Labor Board and steel union officials conferring in Washington in efforts to avert a threatened strike were stunned by the decision and unable to predict its immediate effect. (Story on page 12.)

3—Representatives of 250 iron and steel companies met in New York to consider proposed amendments to the steel code. (Story on page 12.)

WILMINGTON, Del., May 29.—The United States government today lost its struggle with the Weirton Steel Company to enforce at once provisions of the National Recovery Act.

In a ruling handed down in Federal District Court here, Judge John P. Nields refused to grant the government a preliminary injunction which would have restrained the steel corporation from carrying out its policies and practices in defiance of the NRA.

Thus, the huge steel corporation, which has vigorously resisted government intervention in its relations with its employes, emerged triumphant in the first phase of a long-drawn out struggle regarded as the most important test of the constitutionality of the NRA.

The motion denied today prayed for an injunction to be in force pending final outcome of an equity suit filed by the government against Weirton Steel.

What the government's next step in this important conflict will be remained a matter of conjecture, in vlews of Judge Nields' decision. It was said that the Department of Justice may carry its battle for an injunction to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

IMPORTANT RULING

In addition to citing the conflict of material facts, rendering the granting of preliminary injunction without precedent, the jurist ruled that the Norris-La Guardia anti-labor injunction law applies to cases where the government seeks restraint order. In one of the most significent passages of his opinion the judge wrote:

"It is contended by the government that the Norris-La-Guardia Act is not applicalable to a suit wherein the United States is a complaintant. The act deals with labor disputes. It is immaterial who the complainant may be if a labor dispute is

CUBAN ATTACKS LINKED TO PACT

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP.)—The United States and Cuba are expected to sign a new political treaty today in which the Platt amendment is entirely eliminated.

The treaty, in the course of negotiation for several months, will replace the 1903 pact.

The Platt amendment, of the 1903 treaty, is the one giving the United States the right to intervene in Cuba if such action should be considered necessary for the maintenance of order and the protection of American lives and property.

The amendment has long been bitterly attacked by all Cuban factions, and has been considered in many quarters an outstanding bar to complete amicable relations between the two republics.

A definite hookup between the new treaty and attempts at attack on American diplomatic officials in Havana over the weekend was seen. It was held by some that anarchists there were anxious to interrupt good relations and precipitate intervention while the Platt amendment was still on the books.

DILLINGER PAL'S WIDOW IN HUNT

CHICAGO, May 29.—(AP.)—Department of Justice agents are said to be close on the trail of John Dillinger, Indiana desperado.

Agents working under Melvin H. Pervis, chief of the Chicago Bureau of Investigation, are following his tracks with the aid of Mrs. Bess Green, widow of a Dillinger gangster slain at St. Paul.

Mrs. Green was brought here secretly a week ago after getting a small prison sentence at St. Paul for her part in hiding Dillinger while under treatment for a bullet wound in the leg.

Purvis would not discuss the search.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 29.—(AP.)—There was some speculation today by state and local authorities as to whether John Dillinger was back home for the speedway race.

Police were informed by a man who professed acquaintance with the widely-sought desperado that Dillinger was driving about the streets here last night with two companions.

The man said Dillinger's car passed him at a street intersection on the North Side.

Reed Laughs Off Report of Illness

United States Senator David A. Reed laughingly today denied reports that he is seriously ill from bronchial pneumonia, but admitted that he has been resting from an attack of what "seemed to be a combination of a bronchial cold, fever and stomach trouble."

The Senator, resting at the Rolling Rock Club, Ligonier, said:

"Tell them I am too tough to kill."

Legacy Reunites Two, 'New' Sister

Brothers Separated 25 Years Meet In Court

Two brothers separated in infancy and a sister they never saw were united in Waynesburg as the brothers were about to be declared legally dead a quarter of a century after they were parted.

One of the brothers is Frank A. Marlow, 25, of Wilkinsburg, and the other George E. Leonhart, 24, of Crawford County. The sister is Mrs. Geraldine Wilson, of Wheeling, W. Va.

The brothers were Frank and Edward Anderson, born in Richhill Township, Greene County.

While they were babies, they were adopted from the Greene County Children's Home—Marlow by Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Marlow, of Verona, and his brother by Mr. and Mrs. Newton L. Leonhart, of near Conneautville.

The reunion came yesterday in Waynesburg after the sister had petitioned the Greene County court to declare her brothers legally dead so an inheritance might be settled.

The foster parents of the young men read newspaper stories of the proceedings in Waynesburg and made known their foster sons' identities.

Woman Had Asked Kin She Never Saw Be Declared Dead

Both Marlow and Leonhart are married. The former is a route foreman for a grocery firm here, and Leonhardt lives on a farm in Crawford County.

Each is to receive about $900 from the estate in litigation and interests in an oil tract.

COYNE LOSES ACQUITTAL PLEA; VERONA, 4 OTHERS FREED

DEFENSE CONTENDS U. S. FAILED TO PROVE VOTE STEAL

TELLS OF PHONE CALLS

Mary Ryba testified that first Pat O'Malley, the Coyne leader in the Strip, made a phone call, but was unable to get his party. Then, she said, Frank O'Halloran called up somebody and spoke in a low voice, a whisper.

She said she couldn't hear the conversation.

Government prosecutors were unable to bring out that Senator Coyne was among the group on the curb, although this had been testified to previously by George Metzler, former assemblyman.

The waitresses said a man was pointed out to them as Coyne, but they obtained only a rear view of him—"tall, husky, pretty broad," they described.

Judge F. P. Schoonmaker ruled out any reference to Coyne by the waitresses.

Following the girls to the stand was Jacob Fink, of Semple street, Fourth Ward, through whom the government made a strenuous effort to piece together its conspiracy.

STOPPED AT HOTEL

Fink testified that the Senator's brother, Tom Coyne, also a defendant, drove him downtown on election night to the William Penn Hotel. He added:

"We stopped at the hotel and he told me to stay in the lobby for a few minutes. He said he was going to see if the Senator was there. We drove back to the Oakland Real Estate Company."

From there Coyne volunteered to drive Fink home and Walter Butler, a defendant, offered to go along, the witness related. Near the polling place of the Eleventh District in the Fourth Ward, Fink said Butler suggested:

"Pull in here, I wanna see a fellow."

The fellow, according to previous testimony, was Charles McCoy, the judge of elections, and Butler asked him if he had any straight Democratic ballots because "the Senator and Muldowney are running short," according to the record.

Fink said he heard none of the conversation.

Before the government rested, Maurice Nernberg, the hand-writing witness, returned to the stand today to identify what the government contends are fraudulent marks, indicating cheating, on numerous ballots from city wards. Three or four witnesses will follow Nernberg, after which the government will rest.

INDELIBLE PENCIL

Nernberg took several braces of ballots from the Ninth District of the Third Ward, and showed that while indelible pencil had been used to mark the Democratic side of the ballots, ordinary lead pencil had been used to mark the same ballots for United States Senator James J. Davis and Senator Coyne and others on the state ticket.

Prosecutor James I. Marsh asked:

"Have you attempted to pick out from these ballot boxes all the ballots that show changes?"

Nernberg replied:

"No."

"Have you just taken typical ballots?"

"Yes."

Four groups of ballots from the Seventeenth District of the Fourth Ward were next selected and shown to the jury, the handwriting expert showing the marking which, in his opinion, were extra markings by a foreign hand. He took the jury to the window to show them additional phantom markings.

'HEARSAY' CHARGED

As for the testimony of James P. Bailey, the government's star witness, this will be described as hearsay testimony, admissable against the Senator only after the conspiracy itself is proved.

Bailey—the same who charged that Mayor McNair and Theodore L. Moritz wanted him to testify in favor of Coyne—related from the stand that Pat O'Malley had approached him around midnight, in the Tenth Ward, asking his help to steal votes.

Bailey testified that O'Malley, himself a defendant, saluted him with

"Senator Coyne sent me out to see you."

And, according to Bailey:

"When O'Malley was leaving he said he had gotten Mullen to tie up the count in the Fourth District (presumably of the Tenth Ward) and he told me that Coyne was in the Fourth and Fifteenth wards taking care of things there."

FOR ALL DEFENDANTS

The motion for binding instructions will be made for all the defendants.

The defendants are, besides Coyne, Patrick J. O'Malley, the Coyne leader in the Strip; Alderman John J. Verona, John A. Fugassi, Frank O'Halloran, George W. Savage, Louis J. Conley, Assemblyman Patrick J. Maloney, Harry Fink, former deputy constable for Verona; Tom Coyne, the Senator's brother; Walter Butler, of the Fourth Ward; Martin Mullen, of the Tenth Ward.

Verona's activities on the disputed election day were recounted from the stand for the first time by one of his friends, Mike Stabile, county detective. Stabile testified that he drove Verona around to the Third Ward polling places, then left him, about 7 p. m., in front of the Amerita Club.

Stabile said he then went to the Republican headquarters in the William Penn hoping to get a glass of beer (which he didn't get), then went home. Prosecutor Marsh pleaded surprise, contending that before the grand jury the county sleuth had testified he went from the hotel to the Amerita Club—Fernando street hangout for Verona and his admirers.

Stabile conceded:

"If I said it before the grand jury it must be so."

'DUAL MARKINGS'

Much of Nernberg's testimony was much the same as has helped to convict members of numerous election boards in previous trials.

He dipped into ballot boxes brought in from the Second, Third, Fourth and Fifteenth wards and laid in front of the jury of 12 men ballots which he testified were marked by more than one person, or were phantom ballots, marked in wholesale lots.

He sought to convey the impression that cheating was done for the candidacies of Senator Coyne and Congressman Muldowney among others.

Five other witnesses yesterday were Timothy Bailey, brother of James Bailey; W. E. Lang, auditor for the William Penn Hotel, and three close political friends of the Senator—William H. Coleman, the Republican county chairman; C. J. McBride, the county treasurer, and George Metzler, the former assemblyman.

Attorney Eaton accused the two Baileys of threatening to frame Coyne, O'Malley and Muldowney because the Baileys had lost their jobs on the city payroll. This was denied.

BREAKFAST AT 3 A. M.

Coleman and McBride, who apparently spent most of election night in Republican headquarters, told of being with the Senator frequently, of finally having breakfast with him in Childs' about 3 a. m.

Metzler, in booming voice, testified to drinking copious quantities of beer with Lou Conley, a defendant, after the polls had closed. Around 3:30 a. m., Metzler said, Conley was summoned from a beer club by telephone, that the two of them went to Penn and Main street and discussed things, on the street, with numerous other organization men, including Senator Coyne. But, Metzler added, the conversation was casual—how-do-you-do and the like.

COYNE TRIAL SIDELIGHTS

Bailiff James Walsh, one of the custodians of the jury, missed church on Sunday for the first time in nine years. Nor did any of the jurors get to church, the court deciding against it.

Instead, the 12 good and true men heard services over the radio in their hotel rooms.

During the time the jurors are locked up overnight, a few play euchre but most of them listen to the radio. Yes, Amos 'n' Andy is the favorite.

Among the 11 or more members of defense counsel are two who once sat on the other side of counsel table as government prosecutors. They are Warren Van Kirk and David P. MacQuarrie, a former minister and, during the war, an oversea chaplain with the Army.

Harry Little, the ex-Councilman who went out in the McNair victory, managed to crash the courtroom Monday. Former Councilman W. Y. English was seen on the corridors.

Fred Weir, United States Assistant Attorney, was somewhat amazed by the big crowd which turned out to watch him try a counterfeit case—amazed until it was explained that the crowd represented those who couldn't get into the Coyne trial.

Many of the spectators yesterday saw for the first time the famous Nernberg huddle. Through a dozen or more vote-fraud trials now Maurice Nernberg, the government handwriting witness, takes the jury from its box over to the other side of the courtroom, where the light pours in, and shows them the strange markings on the ballots. This is the Nernberg huddle.

There's talk of a gold match between government attorneys, Louis Graham and Jim Marsh, and Defense Counsel O. K. Eaton and C. J. Margiotti—after the Coyne trial is over, with alibis (no matter who loses) barred.

Margiotti, who recently was candidate for governor, has been in rare humor, but he made a point to newspapermen that each of the lawyers represents his own client, and no other.

Counsellor Margiotti drew a laugh as W. H. Coleman was leaving the stand after testifying to a 4 a. m. breakfast at Child's on the morning after election. Prosecutor Graham turned to defense counsel and asked if there were any more questions. Margiotti piped:

"Yes, Coleman wants to know 'hey had scrambled eggs."

TESTIMONY HEARD AT COYNE TRIAL

United States Senator James J. Davis, Congressman M. J. Muldowney, State Senator James J. Coyne and Assemblyman John Scorza were among those named as benefiting from extra "x" marks on ballots in the Third and Fourth wards, Maurice Nernberg, handwriting expert, testified before the jury in the election fraud conspiracy case in Federal Court.

Nernberg took the stand to identify ballots from the 15 districts submitted by the government.

He followed W. E. Lang, general auditor of the William Penn Hotel, to the stand, and was qualified as a handwriting expert—a member of the bar who has specialized for 15 years in this study. J. J. Marsh questioned him:

Q. Have you examined the ballots in the boxes?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you found, in your opinion, definite cross marks made by more than one persons, and whether the marks were made by different persons.

A. I have.

Q. What did you find?

A. In many boxes I found marks made by more than one person.

Q. As to the ballots in the box of the Fourth District, Tenth Ward, and the Eleventh District, Fourth Ward, state if you found any which, in your opinion, were marked by more than one person?

A. I could not.

Edward Skapik, of the county elections department, brought the ballot box of the Sixteenth District, Fourth Ward, from which was taken ballots.

The government then submitted as evidence three groups of ballots, one containing 28 ballots, one six and one five. These, Nernberg testified, contained ballots which, he said, were marked for M. J. Muldowney and James J. Coyne.

He said the marking for these showed similarity of handwriting throughout, while marks on the same sets of ballots on the Democratic side showed natural variations.

Nernberg then took the jury to the window where he showed them what he termed "phantoms." These were the marked x's showing imprints—marks on a ballot atop having been pressed through.

Picking various braces of ballots from various boxes, Nernberg went through a number of boxes, showing, in some places, pencil marks for Davis, Muldowney, Coyne or Scorza, and in the Democratic side, purple pencil marks. The Democratic markings, he pointed out, were all different, indicating each ballot had been marked by a different person. But all the ballots on the Republican side noted, he added, were made by similar handwriting and at times with the same pencil.

Ballot boxes opened were from the Sixteenth District, Fourth Ward; Sixth District, Third Ward; First District, Third Ward; Seventh District, Fifteenth Ward; Eighth District, Third Ward.

One ballot box in the Third Ward showed "extra marks" for presidential electors, Nernberg said.

Some phantom markings were so plain, the expert showed the jury, that a magnifying glass was not needed to show the imprint.

Attorney O. K. Eaton cross-examined Nernberg:

Q.—There were so-called phantom marks so plain that an expert would not be needed to show them to the jury?

A.—Yes.

Q.—But the different pencils require the testimony of an expert?

A.—Sometimes, but in some instances it is obvious.

Q.—Such testimony is a matter of opinion?

A.—Yes, that's all it is.

Q.—And inferences to be drawn from the various cross-marks have to be drawn with great care?

A.—Yes, that's true.

Q.—And you can tell which marks have been put on the ballots in advance of others?

A.—Oh, no!

Attorney John Rossi asked:

Q.—Were the phantom marks for any candidate counted?

A.—No.

Q.—In your opinion, can you be wrong?

A.—That's for the jury to decide.

And Charles J. Margiotti questioned:

Q.—In your opinion, have you ever made mistakes?

A.—I can't say. In the question of indelible pencils and such, I'd say no, but to be fair, in a large number of ballots there might be a case where one might be wrong.

The surprise witness, Mary Ryba, waitress in the Regal Restaurant, at Penn and Main streets, then took the stand. Prosecutor Graham questioned her.

Q.—Do you know Mr. O'Malley and Mr. O'Halloran and Mr. Maloney?

A.—Yes, sir . . . they came in to make a phone call.

She identified the three defendants, who stood up.

Q.—Do you know Senator Coyne?

A.—No—just what a party in the restaurant told me he was on the outside.

(The defense objected, and Judge Schoonmaker ruled the answer out.)

Q.—Who went to the telephone?

A.—O'Malley.

Q.—What number did he call, could you hear?

A.—No, sir . . . He couldn't get the party . . . Maloney was beside him. They were talking real low, whispering. O'Halloran was in the group. Then he called up somebody.

Q.—Could you hear the number?

A.—No, sir, it was a dial phone . . . They they all went out together across the street.

Attorney Edward G. Coll, counsel for O'Malley, cross-examined.

Q.—Do you know O'Malley?

A.—Just to see him . . . He loafs across the street in a beer garden.

Q.—Why, O'Malley doesn't drink?

A.—None of them drinks (smiling).

Q.—When were you subpenaed?

A.—Yesterday, by the federal men.

Q.—How is it your memory is good enough to recall this story from November, 1932, if you only told it yesterday?

A.—Well, Mr. Friel and Mr. Brennan came in right after and—

Q.—How do you know O'Malley didn't get his party on the phone?

A.—Because his nickel came back.

Lang, the hotel auditor, testified as follows:

Q.—Do you have the rooms records of Senator Coyne on election night, November 8, 1932?

A.—No, I do not.

Q.—Haven't you any?

A.—No.

Q.—For November, 1932?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you have any registration records for the period two or three weeks prior to November 8 and for a few weeks after for the room known as 897?

A.—I just looked from November 1 on.

Q.—During the period beginning November 1 on, have you any records as to the registration in room 897?

A.—Yes. Here it is.

Lang presented a registration card, which was examined by government and defense counsel. The latter smiled and Marsh seemed surprised.

Q.—What was the other?

A.—November 21.

Q.—During the period between November 1 and November 10 is this (showing registration card submitted) the only record?

A.—We went over 15,000 cards and as far as we can tell, it is.

Q.—I offer it in evidence. (To the judge) from November 1 to November 9, room 897 was not registered in the name James J. Coyne. This card starts the day after.

Attorney Eaton interrupted:

"I can't understand what it will mean to show that a man from St. Louis registered there."

Marsh continued:

Q.—Do I understand from November 1 on there is no registered card for James J. Coyne for room 897?

A.—That's right.

Q.—Is there any record to show room 897 was not occupied on the night of the election?

A.—The registration cards don't tell it.

Q.—Is there a card showing a room was occupied or rented to the Republican organization or committee on the eighth floor on November 8, 1932?

A.—No.

Q.—Or during the two weeks prior?

A.—I only examined from November 1 on.

Attorney Eaton took the witness.

Q.—Did you look for a card for room 899-E, paid for by the Republican committee?

A.—I know nothing of who paid for a room, except that the room was occupied by some one.

Q.—You don't know who paid?

A.—I don't know, because the cashier takes the money, and she is paid by a great number of people in a day.

Lang said that this room was rented by a George Smith, of Chicago.

New Equipment for Police Before Council

New equipment for police, including 25 gas maces, three modern gas guns and six motorcycles, is proposed in an ordinance now before City Council at the suggestion of Safety Director A. Marshall Bell. Recently two members of Council, John J. Kane and Thomas J. Gallagher, refused to go into a private conference about anti-riot eqipment for the Police Bureau.

Girl Pushed Through Window by Truck

Struck by a driverless truck and knocked through a plate glass window on Smithfield street, near Fourth avenue, Elizabeth White, 25, of 608 Proctor way, was treated at Mercy Hospital today for leg and body bruises. Wiliam Roup, 33, of 1807 Edna street, was arrested on reckless driving charges.

GOLLMAR, BARR 'PULL' PUNCHES OVER AUTO

Black or Tan Issue Embroils Sheriff, Commissioner

A near fist fight between Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar and County Commissioner C. M. Barr added another episode to the bellicose history of the Commissioners' office this afternoon.

Gollmar appeared before the Commissioners and requested a black car for use of his office.

Chairman C. C. McGovern said:

"I don't see where you need a car, but if we give you one it will have to be painted yellow like the other county cars."

Gollmar argued that a yellow car put deputies "on the spot" at evictions and in transporting criminals.

JUST BEFORE THE BATTLE

Barr and McGovern opposed granting a black car while Commissioner W. D. Mansfield favored the Sheriff's request.

After the vote was taken Gollmar heatedly declared:

"I want this car for my men, not for myself, and I don't see why they don't have as much right to a black car as the Commissioners."

Barr shouted:

"You are insolent. This is a hell of a way to come in here and try to get anything."

Gollmar shouted:

"I mean just what I say. There's no reason why we shouldn't have a moderate priced black car for our work, when you men ride around in your expensive automobiles."

Barr yelled:

"I am surprised that you should act this way when I helped elect you."

Gollmar came back:

"I helped elect you too but I'm sorry for it now."

BARR

Barr leaped from his lofty seat on the Commissioners' bench and rushed to Gollmar's side in front of the desk, hands raised.

Gollmar barked:

"Mr. Barr if you weren't an old man I'd take you on. I guess you're trying to pull another Babcock."

He referred to an incident several years ago when Commissioner McGovern felled former Commissioner E. V. Babcock with a blow of his fist.

Gollmar repeated his demand for a black car and walked out as Barr stood by, glaring.

Later, Gollmar said he would buy a car from fees of his office and if the Commissioners didn't like it they could take him into court.

Two Suspects Held In Foiled Robbery

Charged with attempting to hold up John A. Albert, Avalon hardware merchant, two Negroes were held for court at a hearing in Penn Avenue Police Station today by Magistrate Anthony Lucas.

One of the suspects was shot by Albert, who reported two men jumped on the running board of his automobile at Smallman and Thirty-second streets and ordered him to drive down an alley. The suspects are Joseph Hunter, 21, of 3151 Penn avenue, and Bernard Cooper, 21, of 2929 Penn avenue. Hunter was shot in the leg.

Weather Conditions

There is a center of disturbance over South Carolina this morning, lowest pressure reported (29.36 inches), at Charleston. The disturbance is accompanied by high wind and generous rainfall. It is causing cloudiness over all the states from the mountains eastward and rain along the coast as far north as New York. Other centers of low pressure are over Eastern Ontario, Western Colorado and Alberta. These lows are producing some cloudiness, but little precipitation. Temperature changes since yesterday were towards rising generally, and there is no indication for a material change to cooler for the next several days.

River Conditions

The rivers are falling. Stage at Franklin is 0.8 foot; Lock No. 7 (Mon.), 11.0; Pittsburgh, 10.2; Dam No. 4, 9.1; No. 6, 7.7; No. 10, 8.7, and No. 12, 6.5. The dams are up.

SENATE FIGHTS HOUSE PAYOFF BILL 'RIDER'

Both Branches Firm In Stand on Bank Deposit Measure

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Senate leaders today planned to fight to a finish the House closed banks deposit payoff amendment to the bank deposit insurance bill.

With approval of administration forces, the Senate named as its conferees Chairman Fletcher, of the Banking Committee; Glass (Dem.), of Virginia; Bulkley (Dem.), of Ohio; Walcott (Rep.), of Connecticut, and Townsend (Dem.), of Delaware.

Selection of these Senators gave a committee overwhelmingly opposed to the deposit payoff amendment.

While the Senate committee is preparing to put up a finish fight to block the House action, the House conferees are equally determined to retain the payoff feature, which passed without a registered opposing vote.

Meanwhile, Representative McFadden (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, signed the petition on the McLeod payoff bill. This brought the total signers to 139, only six more being needed to force a vote on June 11 despite opposition of administration leaders.

AIMS TO BLOCK TARIFF CHANGE

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP.)—Four major American industries—lumber, oil, coal and copper—were assured today that the protection afforded them against foreign competition under the 1932 revenue act would be "frozen" against revision in the pending tariff bill.

Senator Harrison (Dem.), of Mississippi, in charge of the administration's tariff trading measure, said he would propose such a protecting amendment. It would prohbit altering the excise taxes on imports of the four commodities in any of the trade agreements to be negotiated with foreign countries under the bill.

The 1932 revenue act levied excise taxes which had the same effect as tariffs. The rates were ½ cent a gallon on crude oil, 4 cents on lubricating oils, 2½ cents on gasoline, $3 per 1,000 feet on lumber, 10 cents per 100 pounds on coal, and 4 cents a pound on copper. In addition lumber has a tariff of $1 per 1,000 feet on some types.

LUCAS LINGUIST AS MAGISTRATE

Magistrate Anthony Lucas, sworn in yesterday by Mayor McNair, made a decided hit today when he presided for the first time in Police Court. He likewise proved his versatility as a linguist.

First of all, Magistrate Lucas discharged four defendants charged with being drunk without so much as an echo of the usual McNair reprimand for drinking "Pinchot poison."

In another hearing, that of Arazio Berardelli, charged with violation of the state revenue act, Magistrate Lucas talked with three other defendants, arrested as visitors, in German, Polish and Italian. He held Berardelli for state authorities.

Robert Barber, 32, and Hester Twigman, 28, both Negroes, of 12 Sachem street, also got a good break from the new magistrate. They were charged with operating a gambling place. Police introduced a poker table, cards and a pair of dice, but Magistrate Lucas discharged the men for lack of evidence.

Simonson Flays 'New Leisure' Term

The phrase, "The New Leisure," is the "most shameless conspiracy and hoax ever perpetrated by the middle and ruling classes upon the 70 per cent of the population that cannot afford leisure," according to Lee Simonson, director of the Theater Guild.

Speaking before the Hungry Club yesterday, Simonson said:

"While 70 per cent of the people live in fear of starvation there can be no real leisure—they have neither the money nor the freedom to enjoy the theater or any other form of entertainment."

CAPONE LOSES LIBERTY PLEA

NEW ORLEANS, May 29.—(AP.)—Al Capone, American No. 1 public enemy of prohibition times, today lost his appeal for release from the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga.

The United States District Court of Appeals here denied the appeal of the former gangster chief of Chicago for release from the penitentiary on a writ of habeas corpus where he is serving a 10 year sentence for evasion of the income tax laws.

The former beer and liquor baron sought the writ on the contention that the offenses for which he was convicted were barred by the three-year statue of limitations.

'POLICE' VOTED FOR WIRES

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP.)—The administration's proposal to set up a federal commission to regulate communications systems was approved today by the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

A similar measure already has passed the Senate.

Chairman Rayburn (Dem.), of Texas, said he expected to obtain House action this week and final Congressional action by early next week.

The Rayburn measure creates a bi-partisan commission of five and transfers to it all the authority to supervise communication systems now vested in the Interstate Commerce and Radio Commissions and the Navy Department.

SPROUL IN MOVE FOR DIVORCE

Robert C. Sproul, Jr., a member of a prominent Pittsburgh family, wants a divorce.

Today in Common Pleas Court he testified that his wife, Mrs. Mabel L. Sproul, was an habitual "fault-finder," frequently awakening him during the night, as a bit of diversion, to "nag him."

Sproul also testified that his wife found fault with gues would bring to their home a a result he lost many frie They were married June 20, 19 Sproul lives at 1466 Alabama avenue, Dormont. Mrs. Sproul lives at 110 Natchez street.

Admiral Hughes, Ex-Naval Chief, Dies

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP.)—Admiral Charles Frederick Hughes, retired, formerly commander of the United States fleet and chief of naval operations, died last night at his home in Chevy Chase, Md., after an illness of two months.

Admiral Hughes was retired in 1930.

Couple Wed 55 Years Land in Divorce Court

After 55 years of married life, George W. Jordan, 72, of 327 Lydia street, Carnegie, and his wife, Kate, have come to the parting of the ways.

Jordan appeared today before Judge Thomas W. Marshll, seeking a divorce decree on the grounds of desertion. His testimony that "another man" was involved in the case was cut short by the court.

Accompanying Jordan when he came to court were several children and grandchildren. They supported his testimony that Mrs. Jordan had deserted him 10 years ago.

The couple was married in 1879 their separation taking place about 10 years ago.

RED CROSS CALLED IN FIGHT TO SAVE LIVES OF QUINTUPLETS

FATHER THINKS HE SHOULD BE IN JAIL

Babies Cry All Night And Doctor Calls It 'Hopeful Sign'

CORBEIL, Ont., May 29.—(AP.)—Red Cross Association officials have been asked to aid Mr. and Mrs. Ovila Dionne in taking care of the five baby girls born to the 24-year-old Mrs. Dionne yesterday.

Dr. A. R. Dafoe, of Callander, the attending physician, has asked the association to provide help so that the quintuplets may have every chance of surviving.

After visiting the mother and children today, Dr. Dafoe said the babies were gaining strength. They cried lustily through most of the night, which he said was a hopeful sign. Both mother and children, which are now more than 30 hours old, are doing as well as can be expected, the physician said.

A nurse is attending the family but Dr. Dafoe is anxious they be looked after both day and night. He believes that if proper care can be provided all the babies, the largest of which weighs only 3 pounds 4 ounces, have a good chance of surviving. He said:

"We also require another basket. The five little lassies are huddled in one now and this morning I found one of them crowded into a small space in one corner of their improvised bed."

DOCTORS AMAZED

The continued survival of the children has amazed medical authorities who have beseiged Dr. Dafoe with telephone calls asking their condition. At 5 a. m. today an official of the American Medical Association of Chicago called the physician and said he could hardly believe his statement that the infants were gaining strength.

The modest Dionne home has been closed to all except close relatives today. The presence yesterday of a host of persons and the arrival of congratulatory messages upset the household, but today the 31-year-old father went about his usual tasks and Mrs. Dionne was given time to rest.

'SHOULD BE IN JAIL'

Dionne, as he went about his chores, spoke of the mortgage and explained that he wasn't exactly "built for hard work"—he weighs 130 pounds and is 5 feet 8 inches tall.

Asked if he were proud, the French-Canadian parent replied:

"I'm the kind of fellow they should put in jail."

The five other children in the family, ranging in age from seven years to 11 months and all single births, romped about the farmyard, stopping in their play occasionally to tell visitors all about their new sisters.

From Ernest, the oldest, to little Pauline who has yet to see her first birthday, the Dionne youngsters are strong, healthy children.

WIFE DIVORCED OVER GIRL

Her husband's unconvincing explanation concerning the presence of a comely young woman found in her bedroom shortly after their marriage, today won a divorce for Mrs. Mildred M. Schlachter, of 3429 Clearfield avenue.

Four months after her marriage in 1928, Mrs. Schlachter testified, her husband, Harold J. Schlachter, machinist, began to evince great interest in other women.

She told Judge Samuel H. Gardner:

"One day I came home and found a girl in my bedroom. I asked my husband what was wrong.

"He said, 'I pushed open the bedroom door and found the girl there.'"

During a quarrel which followed, Mrs. Schlachter said her husband pushed her against a radiator, badly cutting her head. On another occasion, she said he picked up an iron doorstop and threatened to throw it at her.

RICHEST INDIAN DIES AT 92

LOS ANGELES, May 29.—(AP.)—Jackson Barnett, 92, incompetent Oklahoma Indian, who became a millionaire through discovery of oil on government lands given him, died here today.

Known as the world's richest Indian, for many years he was a figure in the courts in suits by the United States government to invalidate his marriage to his white wife, Anna Laura Lowe Barnett, and force her to return $550,000 in gifts he had given her.

He lived in a mansion on Wilshire boulevard, one of the main boulevards from Los Angeles to the Santa Monica Bay beaches, and hundreds of thousands knew him as a voluntary director of traffic.

The litigation was in the federal courts for 13 years.

Prior to his first marriage to Anna Laura Lowe at Coffeyville, Kan., he had been declared incompetent by the government. The woman went through a second marriage with the aged Indian at Neosho, Mo.

JACKIE MORROW, 8, PACKING . . . . HE DANCES AND SINGS

BOY, 8, TO GET SCREEN TEST

The romance of movie billboards today held a challenge for 8-year-old Jackie Morrow, Pittsburgh's diminutive master of ceremonies.

For Jackie, star of many children's presentations here, expects to go to Hollywood next month for a screen test.

A sixth-grade pupil at the Luckey School, West End, he has been termed "Hal Leroy, Jr.," for his dancing and "The Baby Baritone" for his singing. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Morrow, of 1740 Wabash avenue, West End. His parents, his sister, Betty, and his grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson, will accompany him to California.

To radio listeners of a few years ago Jackie was known as "Uncle Gimbee, Jr." He has appeared in every "Pittsburgh on Parade" performance, and in 1930 won first place in fan mail among stars of Station WSUN, St. Petersburg, Fla., where he held forth as head of "Sunshine Family." He made his first public appearance at the age of 3.

Cafe Man Cleared In Rum Violation

Frank Mascenik, proprietor of a restaurant in Coverdale, was acquitted today in Federal Court of violating the internal revenue act by concealing 24 pints of untaxed whisky. The defendant was represented by Attorney A. T. Leith, former counsel for the Pittsburgh office of the prohibition department.

MRS. ROOSEVELT DINES IN PRISON

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., May 29.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt spent the night at White Sulphur Springs after visiting the Federal Prison for Women at Alderson, W. Va., yesterday.

The first lady dined at the prison, sitting at the head table in company with officials of the institution.

She arrived at White Sulphur Springs accompanied by Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury. There they joined Mrs. Morgenthau's mother, Mrs. Morris Fatman, a sister of Gov. Herbert Lehman, of New York.

'First Lady' Donates $3,000 Radio Earnings

PHILADELPHIA, May 29.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has given to charity a $3,000 check given to her for a six-minute radio broadcast.

The money was received yesterday by the American Friends Service Committee for educational and health work in homestead communities.

Police Capture Pig After Chase in Hill

A pig, captured by police as it roamed Hill district streets, was enjoying its "respite" from the slaughter house at the city stable in Tunnel street today. The pig was caught yesterday by Patrolmen Thomas Lawrence and Roger Virts after a chase in Dinwiddie street.

DR. MACARTNEY RAPS CHURCH MERGER PLAN

Presbyterian Minority Threatens to Bolt in U. P. Union Fight

CLEVELAND, May 29.—(AP.)—A proposed merger of the Presbyterian Church with the United Presbyterian Church was attacked by the Rev. Clarence E. Macartney, of Pittsburgh, former moderator of the General Assembly, at the Westminster Seminary dinner last night before 180 delegates to the one hundred forty-sixth general assembly of the Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Macartney said the proposed plan of organic union does not provide for dissenting congregations, does not incorporate a proper interpretation of the historical Presbyterian Westminster standards, and is not a measure of true unity, but of disunity.

No plan of opposition was formulated at the dinner. The merger question is scheduled to come before the General Assembly today. It is opposed by a minority group, the fundamentalists, but it is expected to be approved.

THREATEN TO BOLT

Fundamentalist thunder, carrying the threat of withdrawal from the denomination, was in the offing at the dinner. The fundamentalist group is headed by Dr. J. Gresham Machen, of Philadelphia.

Dr. Machen indicated that favorable action on the union—which a large part of the assembly is inclined to believe is almost certain—may result in the fundamentalist faction withdrawing from the church.

Such action might also be called for if the charges that his group has violated the constitution of the church in setting up its own board of foreign missions are pressed, Dr. Machen said.

ATHEISM SIDETRACKED

A dispute on atheism was sidestepped deftly by the assembly today, when it was ruled that a resolution presented by the Rev. Robert L. Roberts could not be acted upon. It called for expulsion of persons with atheistic leanings from Presbyterian colleges and the elimination of any atheistic teachings in their curricula.

Earlier in the day the assembly, indicting militarism, the liquor traffic and producers of immoral moving pictures, adopted a series of resolutions prepared by a social welfare committee, which included a clause upholding the right of workers and employers to organize and bargain collectively.

The assembly opposed military training, "especially in our secondary schools and colleges, as tending to cultivate the war spirit and as distinctly anti-Christian in character, and further, was a waste of the people's money."

LEGACY CLAIMS REUNITE TWO

Brought together to claim inheritances in Greene County, Frank A. Marlow, 25, of Wilkinsburg, and George E. Leonhart, 24, of near Conneautville, met for the first time since childhood and saw their sister, Mrs. Geraldine Wilson, of Wheeling, W. Va., for the first time.

The brothers were about to be declared legally dead so the estate might be settled. Their foster parents, reading newspaper stories of the proposed procedure, informed them of their identities.

The brothers were adopted from a children's home while they were babies. They were children of the late Rosetta Abercrombie Anderson, Greene County. Upon adoption their names were changed to those of the foster parents.

FILM DIRECTOR SAFE IN PLOT

HOLLYWOOD, May 29.—(AP.)—A ruse by which a supposed kidnaper hoped to lure Leo McCarey, film director, into a trap was reported to police early today.

Detectives were told that a telephone message was received at the Paramount studios shortly after midnight from a man who represented himself as McCarey's chauffeur.

The studio telephone operator was informed that Mrs. McCarey had been hurt in an accident and she and the chauffeur were in the director's automobile at a downtown street corner.

At the time of the message, however, McCarey was directing a picture at a considerable distance from the studio offices and the call did not reach him for nearly two hours.

McCarey telephoned his home and learned that his wife and chauffeur were there. No accident had occurred and the chauffeur said he had not telephoned the studio.

Autoist Acquitted In Man's Death

A directed verdict of not guilty was ordered by Judge Samuel H. Gardner yesterday in the trial of August Sicona, of McKeesport, who was tried for involuntary manslaughter in the death of Joseph Biaconi, 37, of Shaw avenue, McKeesport.

Biaconi was fatally injured in an automobile accident a year ago. Judge Gardner held the state had failed to show criminal negligence against Sicora.

Unconsciousness Of Spider Victim Begins Sixth Day

BOISE, Idaho, May 29.—(AP.)—The sixth day of unconsciousness began for Dr. William Erkenbeck, victim of the bite of a "Black Widow" spider.

Hospital officials reported little change in his condition and said he had "at no time" regained consciousness since the poison overcame him last Thursday.

Bitten on the leg May 20, the 54-year-old physician first experienced severe pains. When the pains increased to such a point that unconsciousness set in, he was taken to a hospital.

Dr. Harold W. Stone said there is no antidote for the poison and the only help available is to support the patient's strength while his system combats it.

Reports from Klamath Falls, Ore., that enough of the spiders had appeared there to require a control campaign, recalled that during the last few months they have been reported in Boise, Grand View and Glenns Ferry, Idaho, and Baker, Ore.

River Captain Quits, Plans Beauty Shop

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 29.—(AP.)—Miss Louise Zeller, river boat captain, has announced her retirement in favor of a more ladylike profession. Capt. Zeller has operated the ferry Mary Ellen on the Mississippi between St. Louis and Carondelet, Ill., for about four years. She's going to open a beauty shop.

'Dirty Dish' Slayer Faces Second Trial

MARSHALL, Ill., May 29.—(AP.)—Hubert Moor, former school teacher who confessed he killed his wife August 15, 1932, because he got tired of seeing dirty dishes in the sink, faced his second trial today. Moor's confession was made at his first trial, at which he was sentenced to death.

FATHER CAUGHT IN DEATH OF 4

NEW YORK, May 29.—(AP.)—A father hunted since St. Patrick's Day for hammering his four small daughters to death was held today as a filicide.

John McHale, whose wife describes him as a man who took drink and religion to excess by turns, was arrested last night when he returned to the Bronx, hunting his wife.

daughters, ranging in age from 18 months to 6 years, were beaten to death with a hammer in his home. The slayings followed a quarrel between the McHales in which Mrs. McHale was struck and beaten. She ran from the house, and upon returning a few hours later found one daughter bludgeoned to death and the other three, unconscious from hammer blows. They died later.

She said her husband, a CWA worker, had been drinking.

KENNEDYS DENY SISTERS' CLAIM

Testimony in the attempt of Mrs. R. Templeton Smith and Mrs. J. O. Miller to remove Joseph W. and Julian Kennedy, Jr., their brothers, as executors of the $667,000 estate of Julian Kennedy, their father, is expected to end today with testimony of the brothers in defense of their administration of the estate.

Before Judge Thomas P. Trimble in Orphans' Court yesterday, Joseph Kennedy denied any mishandling of the estate, contending that the sisters objected to the purchase of certain securities. The brothers deny that they refused permission for an audit.

FRENCH AIRMEN PONDER NEXT FLIGHT

N. Y. Gives Official Welcome to Ocean Hop Pilots

NEW YORK, May 29.—(AP.)—Two French air officers whose wings wobbled after carrying them from Paris to America on a flight which was intended to end at San Diego, Cal., were wondering today where to go from here.

Their dream of a non-stop record and a million-franc prize shattered when vibrating wings caused them to set their plane down at Floyd Bennett Airport yesterday afternoon, Maurice Rossi and Paul Codos awoke in their hotel suite today refreshed and ready for New York's official welcome.

The weary airmen had little time for festivities when they climbed from their huge monoplane.

DRINK CHAMPAGNE

They wanted rest—and a bottle of champagne. And off they were hurried to a Park avenue hotel, where they got both.

Vibration of the wings and rudder of their silver monoplane—the Joseph LeBrix—halted their ambitious undertaking, they explained. Their gasoline supply would have been sufficient for the remainder of their essayed 6,100-mile flight.

Their first words after landing were of disappointment.

Rossi said:

"I am not at all happy."

Codos said:

"I am very, very sorry."

After some reflection, Rossi said:

"But it is better to be here alive than a hero dead."

Later, over the bottle of champagne, they agreed they hadn't done so badly, at that.

Their flight, in addition to being one of the few successful east-west crossing of the North Atlantic, established Rossi and Codos as the first to make the crossing in both directions. They made the eastward flight last August when they set the present non-stop distance record—approximately 5,700 miles from New York to Rayak, Syria.

WIN NEW HONORS

New honors from their beloved France helped temper their disappointment. An official message from the French government announced the promotion of Rossi from lieutenant to captain in the air corps and the elevation of Codos to commander of the Legion of Honor.

Whether the two airmen would fly on to San Diego, their original goal, remained to be decided. They announced definitely, however, they would stay in New York eight days or two weeks, until mechanics arrive from France to go over their ship.

There were reports from Paris they might fly back across the Atlantic in quest of a new record, but the birdmen said their plans would be governed by orders from the French government.

PITTSBURGHER CRASHES IN AIR

High in the skies over the Canal Zone, Lieut. Paul G. Miller, Pittsburgh army aviator, narrowly escaped death in an airplane collision yesterday, according to Associated Press dispatches from Panama.

Flying at 12,000 feet, Miller's plane scraped wings with a plane piloted by Lieut. Neil Ausman. Ausman's plane became unmanageable and he "bailed" out, his plane crashing in the jungle. Miller was able to land his plane at Albrock Field. He was cut slightly on the forehead.

Miller is the son of Mrs. Harry C. Miller, of 1026 Stanford road, North Side. He graduated from West Point in 1931. He is a brother of Ford Miller, of Radio Station WCAE.

French Fliers Hop Over South Atlantic

NATAL, Brazil, May 29.—(AP.)—The Arc-En-Ciel (Rainbow), tri-motored French mail plane arrived here late yesterday after flight from St. Louis, Senegal.

The plane, carrying 300 pounds of mail for distribution in South America, made the 1,900-mile trip in approximately 14 hours.

M'NAIR JOB AX PROBE VOTED BY COUNCIL

An open break has occurred between City Council and the executive branch of the city government represented by Mayor McNair and his department heads.

Council has voted unanimously for a hearing Thursday for all persons who have been discharged or forced to resign during the new administration.

Friends of James P. Bailey, city assessor, dismissed by the Mayor, declare Bailey will be there to state his case if it is possible for him to be absent from the Coyne trial in Federal Court.

Whether his presence will bring any amplification of the charges of intimidation which he has hurled against the Mayor and Secretary Theodore I. Moritz, whom he has accused of seeking to influence him to change his testimony in favor of Senator James J. Coyne, has not been indicated.

OTHERS DISMISSED

There are also two other former city assessors dismissed by the Mayor, O. B. Hannon and John Murphy, who will have a chance to speak.

Magistrate Charles J. McCall, who resigned, it is believed comes under the provisions arranged by Council.

Howard J. (Doc) Neely, former chief clerk of the Bureau of Highways and Sewers, who stepped aside for George G. Wedd, reported to be a relative of the Mayor, is to get a special hearing at the insistence of Councilman William A. Magee.

Mrs. J. Wood Clark, former chief clerk in the division of accounts and permits of the Public Safety Department, dismissed by Safety Director A. Marshall Bell under the Mayor's policy banning city employes from holding party jobs, will have her opportunity to talk.

And so will hundreds of other city employes forced out of their jobs in constant changes which have occurred since the beginning of the new administration.

The guerilla warfare which has been going on for some time between Council and the Mayor and his cabinet flamed out into the open yesterday.

JOHNSTON, MAGEE CLASH

The spark which set it off was a clash between Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston and Magee.

Four out of 11 materials inspectors in the Bureau of Tests had been dismissed after their titles were changed, and Magee complained to Director Johnston, stating that Council wanted to keep the personnel as it was before.

Director Johnston explained that the change in titles had required the inspectors to take civil service examinations, and that three had failed and one had not taken the test. Magee accused Johnston of getting people thrown off the payroll on technicalities, and Johnston replied:

"No one is trying to put them out lightly. I resent the implication. There are people on the payroll who have no right to be there. They are barnacles."

Magee replied:

"There are ways to get rid of them."

Johnston:

"I find it too difficult."

Magee:

"It's intended to be so."

Magee then declared that Neely should not have been forced to resign. He said he knew Neely's worth from experience.

Johnston replied:

"I don't think you do."

Magee answered:

"This kind of administration prevents me from voting for any change of title."

He had reference to the fact that if a title is changed, civil service rights are forfeited, and the job probably goes to someone else.

ACTION DELAYED

Council delayed action on the inspectors in the Bureau of Tests until after the hearing Thursday. In the meantime Council members are interested in learning the nature of the examination questions on which three inspectors flunked.

Magee also complained bitterly about two candidates for lifeguards who were turned down in civil service tests because they could not swim the "back stroke." Both men, he declared, were "loaded down" with lifesaving medals.

The Civil Service Commission stands somewhere between Council and the department heads in the battle, and probably closer to the executive side. The commission recently turned down Council's request for names of persons dismissed under direct authority of the commission.

Woman Judge?

MRS. LOIS M'BRIDE

Mrs. McBride, today recommended for a County Court judgeship — contingent upon the "promotion" of Judge Richardson from County Court to the Common Pleas vacancy.

VOTE MACHINE BONDS PLANNED

The County Commissioners will probably issue $750,000 in bonds to pay for putting the county's 1,100 voting machines in order.

They have instructed County Solicitor M. B. Lesher to draw up a resolution authorizing the bonds.

The action came after County Controller Robert G. Woodside had submitted an estimate of $700,262 as the requirement for meeting the repair expenses on the machins.

Largest item in Woodside's summary was an estimate of $625,000 for the reconditioning of the machines by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. The company is doing the work on a cost plus 15 per cent basis. For preliminary experimental work $10,000 was listed due the company.

When the repairs are completed, the Commissioners can attempt to collect $600,000 contractor's bond, put up by the Poole Electric and Manufacturing Company, which made the machines.

LOIS M'BRIDE SUPPORTED FOR JUDGESHIP

By MARK SHIELDS

Direct recommendation for an appointment to the Common Pleas Court vacancy caused by the death of the late Judge Sylvester J. Snee several months ago probably will be made to Gov. Pinchot before the end of the week.

It will be a double-jointed suggestion, approved by Judge Ralph H. Smith and County Commissioner William D. Mansfield, and is understood to have the tacit acquiescence of Senator Frank J. Harris.

Should the Governor agree to the recommendation, County Court Judge Joseph A. Richardson will be promoted to the Common Pleas bench and Mrs. Lois Downs McBride will succeed Judge Richardson, who was appointed to the subordinate court in January on the recommendation of Judge Smith.

The latest plan represents an agreement between the outstanding Pinchot leaders, with the exception of County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, who preferred Assistant County Solicitor Mortimer B. Lesher.

Mansfield and Smith believe that their influence will be superior to that of McGovern, and both are vigorously opposed to Lesher.

Mrs. McBride headed the women's division for the Pinchot primary campaigns in 1930 and 1934. Last fall she was a candidate for nomination for judge of the newly-created Juvenile Court and had the backing of Mansfield, McGovern and Commissioner C. M. Barr. She ran second in the Republican primary, trailing Charles G. Lane, Jr., and leading Gustav L. Schramm. In the Democratic primary Schramm defeated Mrs. McBride and in the November election was elected over Lane.

On the two tickets in the primary Mrs. McBride received more votes than Schramm.

Attorney Horace Thomas, Jr., who was designated Pinchot campaign manager here in the recent primary, is reported to be no longer under consideration for judicial appointment.

Ask State Board About Food Refusal

City Council will send two representatives with a delegation of the unemployed to Harrisburg, June 6, to ask the State Emergency Relief Board why Pennsylvania is not accepting federal surplus food. Council yesterday voted down a motion to request the state board to ask for the surplus food which the government has at its disposal as a result of purchases under the agricultural adjustment act.

Richardson Speaks At Mifflin Exercises

Judge Joseph A. Richardson was the principal speaker at commencement exercises of the Mifflin Township public schools last night in Carnegie Library, Munhall. George Herbel, president of the School Board, presented the diplomas.

PRIMARY COUNT END THURSDAY, ERROR CAUGHT

On orders of Commissioner C. M. Barr the Return Board will finish the official tabulation of Allegheny County votes on Thursday. Seven hundred and one districts out of 944 have been completed.

Barr ordered members of the board to report half an hour early and work an extra hour at night in order to speed the work.

The board today corrected an error in the tabulation of the vote in the Thirty-eighth Senatorial District. The error was made when totals were taken only from one book in the returning board room.

NEW TOTALS

The new official totals give Edward R. Frey the Democratic nomination with 2,800 votes, and Joseph G. Armstrong, Jr., the Republican nomination with 6,543 votes.

In the Forty-second Senatorial District Morris Einstein won the Republican nomination with 8,558 and B. B. McGinnis the Democratic with 4,340. W. A. Herd and Minnie M. Wehner were elected to the Republican state committee and V. F. Gavin and Elizabeth C. Daley to the Democratic state committee.

HOUGH NOMINEE

Completion of the tabulation from the Fourth Legislative District showed Edward B. Goehring and Leonard P. Kane Republican nominees and James W. Patterson and A. P. Kilgallen Democratic nominees.

Edward M. Hough and W. H. Robertson won the Republican nominations and John J. O'Keefe and William A. Shaw the Democratic nominations in the Eighth Legislative District.

In the First Legislative District P. J. Maloney and W. J. Gallagher won the Republican nominations and T. P. Money and G. J. Sarraff the Democratic.

Hearst Magazines Change Editorships

Richard Berlin, general manager of the Hearst magazines, announces that Arthur H. Samuels, editor of Harper's Bazaar, has been appointed editor of House Beautiful combined with Home and Field, to guide this magazine through the era of expansion which it entered with the merger of House Beautiful and Home and Field.

Both Harper's Bazaar and House Beautiful combined with Home and Field are members of the Stuyvesant Quality Group of the Hearst publications.

Carmel Snow, fashion editor of Harper's Bazaar, has been made editor of that publication. Kathryn Bourne, associate editor of Cosmopolitan, has been appointed fiction editor of Harper's Bazaar.

Stewart Beach will be associate editor of House Beautiful combined with Home and Field.

MAGEE FIGHTS OHIO CAB PLAN

Councilman William A. Magee has announced opposition to the driver-ownership plan of cab operation as used by the Zone Cab Company in Cleveland.

The Zone Cab Company, in hearings before Council, has announced that if allowed to enter the Pittsburgh field it will be willing to pay its drivers on a percentage basis similar to the method followed by the Parmelee System, the company now operating here.

Magee recently sponsored a resolution in Council to instruct the City Solicitor to confer with the Public Service Commission with a view to establishing the city's rights under an act of 1915 to cooperate with the commission in deciding cab rates within the city.

He is opposed to the driver-ownership possibility on the ground that it would scatter responsibility for accidents among a large number of individuals.

HOLD UP VOTE ON COAL VETO

City Council has held over for a week consideration of Mayor McNair's veto of the ordinance which would cancel the city's contracts with three companies for welfare coal at prices below the present code levels.

The Mayor in his veto message had attacked Pinchot, the "brain trust" at Washington, the Legislature and the national recovery price regulations in general.

Councilman P. J. McArdle declared yesterday that the bulk of the Mayor's complaint was beside the question. He stated that no coal is being furnished under the contracts at present because state and federal funds are buying the coal.

By rescinding the contracts, he declared, the city money set aside for coal would be made available for other purposes.

POLITICAL FOES LIST EXPENSES

This is the last day for candidates for other than state-wide offices to file their expense accounts with the clerk of courts.

Magistrate J. Scott Morgan, beaten by Henry Ellenbogen on both tickets in the Thirty-third Congressional District, has listed expenses as $1,767.

P. J. Sullivan, who lost to Michael J. Muldowney and Theodore L. Moritz in the Thirty-second Congressional District, wrote he spent $1,747.

B. B. McGinnis, who won the Democratic state senatorial nomination in the Forty-second District, stated he spent less than $50. J. Twing Brooks, who took the Democratic congressional nomination in the Thirtieth District, listed $80 spent and $29 owed.

George S. Oliver, successful for Republican county committee, spent less than $50.

Cleanup Campaign Launched by Officials

A municipal clean-up campaign was launched today at a conference of the heads of the Safety, Health, Public Works and Law departments with a view to obtaining co-operation of all city employes.

A drive on bad sanitary conditions will be begun with police and firemen directed to report any violations of existing ordinances. City Solicitor S. C. Scully said all sanitation ordinances would be revised and modernized as part of the campaign.

Here it is! The Tire That Solved The TREAD WEAR MYSTERY and won in hardest tests ever held.. "G-3"

Gives 43% longer non-skid mileage—16% more non-skid blocks—5½% wider road contact—No Extra Price

THE new "G-3" Goodyear tire results from months and months of careful research and test to provide better tread wear. All treads on all makes—even on ours—were wearing too fast. It was a mystery until nation-wide investigation by Goodyear experts uncovered the facts. The new automobiles, with higher power, better brakes, put new demands on tires—and no existing tire could stand the strain.

Many, many tread designs were tested. "G-3" was one of them. Just the engineers' symbol at first—but now the name of the tread that outlasted all others! Goodyear test cars ran day and night, starting and stopping, frazzling brakes and wracking the cars, to prove "G-3" a tougher tire than any before it.

..."G-3" stood up long after other tires gave out

The "G-3" keeps the famous All-Weather Tread grip in the center where it is more important than ever—for quick, safe stops on smooth highways and boulevards.

But, here's how it's made better than ever:

It is a wider tread—5½% more road contact.

WARNING!

Watch the rest of the industry try to copy this amazing tire. Watch them try to duplicate Goodyear's claims. But, remember, you have to have "non-skid" before you can have "non-skid mileage." And to have "non-skid," you have to have GRIP where you see it here—GRIP in the center of the tread—the place where it counts, because it's the spot where the tire contacts the road. Look at the grip on this Goodyear Tire and ask yourself why buy any tire that lacks this safety?

Test cars ran day and night—starting and stopping—frazzling brakes

More non-skid blocks—16% more—have been made possible by nesting them closer.

Riding-ribs are wider—11½% wider—and grooves are narrower.

There's more rubber in the tread—an average of 2 pounds more per tire.

The "G-3" All-Weather with its wider, safer, longer-lasting tread would have been impossible without Supertwist—which only Goodyear uses in tire building.

For the wider tread puts added strain upon the tire body, a strain that extra-durable, extra-elastic Supertwist can bear without the slightest difficulty.

The result is a matchless tire—and a tread that delivers 43% longer non-skid mileage!

"G-3" All-Weather tires are now ready for you. Months ago the first "G-3" tires, in a few sizes, went into owners' service without announcement. In this actual service the new tire has lived up to its showing in the hardest driving tests that Goodyear has ever used.

See the new "G-3" Goodyear All-Weather Tread Tire at your nearest Goodyear Dealer.

Costs more to build—gives 43% more non-skid mileage—costs no more to buy—that's real value!

TAX MILLIONS FAIL TO PAY TEACHERS

In spite of the fact that approximately $6,500,000 has been paid to Allegheny County school districts by the state during the last two years, teachers in about 12 county districts will end their school term with several months salary still unpaid.

Residents of Allegheny County pay approxiately $23,500,000 in school taxes each year for operating the 120 separate school boards here. This is in addition to the appropriation received from the state. The biennial report just issued by State Auditor General Frank E. Baldwin, discloses that the state made payments totaling $6,448,124.97 to Allegheny County during the two-year period ending May 31, 1933. This is $791,530 more than was paid to Philadelphia County during the same period.

County Superintendent of Schools C. E. Dickey today stated that appropriations from the state had prevented closing the schools before the regular term had closed, but he said that in approximately 15 districts the teachers had not been paid their salaries for several months.

FIGHT FOR ECONOMY

Allegheny County's multiple school system has been the target for much criticism for some time. Economists urging consolidation point out that operation costs could be greatly reduced if there were less districts and fewer salaried officials.

Although the residents of the county pay out approximately $23,500,000 annually in school taxes, before this money even reaches the respective school treasurers, commission-paid tax collectors take out their share to the tune of more than $300,000.

School teachers, janitors, collectors of taxes, solicitors, secretaries, auditors and treasurers drew more than $16,000,000 in salaries in the last year. Economists point out that in an eight-year period in Pennsylvania the total costs of our local school districts increased from 111 million dollars to 211 million dollars annally. State aid constitutes 11 to 15 per cent of the total expenditures for the local districts.

One reason for the increase in educational costs, economists point out, is that there are 120 districts in operation, in Allegheny County, when one district would function more efficiently and less costly. Also that each of the 120 separate and distinct school boards elects directors, tax collectors and auditors. Then the school board must have, in addition to the paid collector and auditors, a solicitor, a treasurer and a secretary.

'TOP HEAVY' SYSTEM

A few important facts about the schools of Pennsylvania are:

Pennsylvania has 2,587 school districts.

Thirty-two districts have no schools nor teachers, yet a regular board is elected, a secretary, a solicitor, treasurer, auditors and tax collectors, elected, hired or appointed.

Two of the 32 districts are in Allegheny County, Kilbuck Township and Ben Avon Heights Borough having no schools nor teachers.

One hundred and ten districts in the state have only one teacher and one room schoolhouses, but the same elaborate setup exists with an elective board and paid officials.

Going further, there are 156 districts each having only two teachers; 143 each having only three teachers, and 167 each having only four teachers.

A summary shows that there are in the state 608 school districts in which the school directors outnumber the teachers employed. Each board in the 608 districts has more paid officers than there are school teachers.

Boy Escapes Unhurt In Runaway Auto

A boy about 7, whose identity was not learned by police, was rescued from an automobile as it ran, driverless, down Mansion street, Hazelwood, late yesterday. The car, owned by Harvey Stein, of 2312 Eldridge street, started down the street after the boy released the brakes, police said. Ben Perer, of 239 Mansion street, witnessed the boy's frantic attempt to halt the runaway automobile, jumped to the running board and pulled him out, police reported.

PETERMAN'S DISCOVERY

ern well, it is also the ability to govern well, the knowledge which enables a people to govern well.

"Knowledge will forever govern ignorance," said James Madison, "and a people who mean to be their own governors must arm themselves with the power which knowledge gives."

WE DO NOT want to sacrifice or surrender our democracy.

We do not want to depend on the superior ability and superior unselfishness of any one man.

We would not know when we might have a dictator who would not be wise, or one who would not be conscientious or unselfish.

We have developed and grown to greatness as a nation under democratic forms of government.

The only certain course for our future development is to continue under tried and proven democratic institutions.

But to make democracy successful, the people must be educated to self-government.

They must be trained in knowledge, in patriotism, in devotion to the public welfare.

This is the great end and aim of the American system of public education.

OUR SCHOOLS are the very foundation of our democracy.

Upon this foundation the whole structure of government, the entire edifice of our republican institutions rest.

The more schools we have, the fewer politicians we need.

The way to get more schools is to get rid of useless politicians.

And the way to get rid of useless politicians is to begin by modernizing our obsolete system of county and local government.

It has come down to us from the days of the oxcart. In the days of the automobile it is a public nuisance.

By reducing our three thousand counties to three hundred, and by eliminating thousands of useless units of local government, we shall be able to provide for the support of more and better schools and we shall profit by getting rid of thousands of useless and expensive politicians.

Give us fewer politicians and more and better schools.

The clean Center Leaves are the mildest leaves

They Taste Better!

WE like to tell about the finer tobaccos in Luckies—the choicest Turkish and domestic, and only the mild, clean center leaves—they cost more—they taste better. Then "It's toasted"—for throat protection. But we're just as proud of the way Luckies are made. They're so round and firm, so free from loose ends. That's why Luckies "keep in condition"—do not dry out. Luckies are always—in all-ways!—kind to your throat.

"It's toasted"

Seasoned Writers, Actors To Stage Radio Dramas

By AIRCASTER.

Signs and portents in the radio horoscope indicate that air drama will have outgrown its infantile paralysis during this season and emerge in the full-blown glory for which it has yearned for 10 years.

The only prescription lacking to bring about this happy maturity is a dearth of competent playwrights cognizant of the peculiarities of microphone production, and I am assured that these will be forthcoming as soon as they can be recruited.

Some months ago, while I was conversationally surveying the radio scene with John Royal, program chief of NBC, he remarked sagely:

"There's no reason why good writers should lie in garrets any longer, unless they happen to prefer the Bohemian atmosphere. We are telling them that they are vital to good radio.

"Radio executives have learned at last that they must pay well for writing talent, just as they must pay high salaries to talented performers."

It was mutually agreed on the occasion of that recent and informal survey, that the outstanding weakness of broadcasting lay in the anaemic condition of its drama.

That was just after the opening of Radio City, when, as a gesture of courtesy, a galaxy of stagefolk had been invited to the NBC microphones in celebration of the inaugural.

It was then that Royal qualified as a prophet. He made predictions that have since proved a full 50 per cent true, and now that a bid has gone out from all networks to talented writers, the advent of a vitalized type of drama is assured.

"There are two cures," Royal said, "for our under-developed drama."

VALLEE PIONEERED

Employment of qualified writers was one of them, and, to quote the program chief again—

"The other is the adoption by radio of trained actors, in preference to the studio troups now holding forth. When I listened to the guest stagefolk, as we opened Radio City, I was so impressed by their superior poise, diction, and spontaneity, that the necessity for enticing them to the air became plain.

"I knew that we must go to the stage and screen for replacementts and that if we did, we could eliminate script reading and other stilted forms of acting."

Radio went after the actors—and they are now fulfilling the prophecy by stampeding the studios. But there are not enough radio plays for them, and they have been forced to the expedient of using old dramas, or sections of them, because there is nothing in the way of drama available to radio, that fits in with the time restrictions.

Since April 1, no less than 45 famous personages from the stage and screen have become successful microphoners. But they have come armed only with improvisations of drama—with few exceptions.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Merrily we roll along and information and clues keep pouring in about the Foster birthplace. It seems to me that the Globe Trotters are well equipped to settle this dispute of more than civic interest.

Henry Ford bought a birthplace, all right, but every now and then it appears that Mr. Ford isn't moving the right piece of property out of Pittsburgh. Last Saturday the Globe Trotter came to the conclusion, after the perusal of a book written by Stephen Foster's brother containing a picture of the homestead, that Henry Ford still doesn't have the Foster birthplace, an opinion only, however.

The examination of the next clue ought to shed more light on the subject. It is a copy of the Pittsburgh Leader, dated 1888. It describes by words and pictures the City of Pittsburgh at that time and also in it appears a sketch of the Foster family.

This historical document, proving again that the newspaper today prints the history of tomorrow, is in the possession of Mrs. A. B. Bigley, Pittsburgh.

Will you bring it in or send it, Mrs. Bigley?

They knew this secret of butter flavor
A generation ago, when Baltimore was seventh heaven for true gourmets, the wisest cooks prepared diamond-back terrapin with the yolk of an egg and plenty of fresh cream and butter. Not just any butter, but the finest to be had. And it was whipt for many minutes to bring out fully its delicate flavor. Only properly whipt butter could add to diamond-back terrapin that last subtle touch of flavor that proclaimed perfection.

Now KRAFT brings you the epicures' secret...INSTANT and FINER BUTTER FLAVOR....

Chiffon WHIPT PURE Butter

CREATED BY KRAFT

● Here is a new experience, your first real taste of butter. Touch a bit of the new Chiffon Butter to your tongue and instantly you get all the true, delicate flavor of purest, freshly-churned, creamery butter.

Try Chiffon Butter and you understand why a few epicures and skilled chefs guarded this secret: good butter that is properly whipt tastes much better.

Until the great resources of the Kraft organization went to work to perfect butter making methods, this superior butter was not available to the general public. Now the Kraft facilities in the production and distribution of fine dairy products bring Chiffon Butter to you.

What is the secret of Chiffon Butter's instant flavor—the secret of its creamy, spreadable texture? Starting with the finest selected and pasteurized cream, the Kraft method adds to the customary churning operation a further step—scientifically developed and perfected by Kraft dairy experts. In this additional operation the butter is carefully whipt. Its flavor and aroma elements are distributed more completely and uniformly through every bit of the butter. They are more instantly released when the butter reaches the taste buds on the tongue.

Today, tomorrow, the next time you go to your grocer's, take home a pound or two of Chiffon Butter. You will enjoy your first real taste of butter.

SPREADS EASIER

● Chiffon Butter spreads more easily, more smoothly, than ordinary butter—yet keeps its form in warm weather Easy to make sandwiches with this delicious butter.

CREAMS MORE QUICKLY

● Chiffon Butter creams in much less time and much more easily than ordinary butter. Saves time and work in making sauces and cakes. And the Chiffon Butter flavor makes all good foods taste better.

ECONOMICAL

● Chiffon Butter is economical, as you will appreciate when you see the big Chiffon package—nearly a third larger than the usual half pound of butter package—because this butter is whipt.

INSTANT FLAVOR!

Conference Of B.P.W. Planned

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

A somewhat unusual statement heads the program announcements for the third northeast regional conference of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. It reads, "Sport clothes and sensible shoes are almost a necessity."

The conference is to be held at the Maplewood Club, Bethlehem, N. H., June 29, 30 and July 1. On coming upon such an item as "Walk to Cruft's Lodge for view of mountains," one realizes the necessity for the statement concerning "sensible shoes." A dinner and entertainment will be given for the guests arriving on June 28.

Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, of Washington, who is scheduled to make a luncheon address at the meeting on the twenty-ninth, has been in an automobile accident and if she is unable to appear her place will be filled by Miss Ella King Vogel, of Pittsburgh, she having been asked to talk on "How to Read the Independent Woman," the federation's publication. Miss Vogel has also been asked to conduct the round table on teaching.

"Our Federation as Viewed by a Westerner, is the subject on which Dean M. Beatrice Olson, of Grand Forks, N. D., is to speak. For the business women round tables will be conducted by Miss Grace M. Rice, of Bangor, Me., on insurance, ownership and business, advertising and promotion, politics, retail store positions and finance. Under Dr. Ruth E. Emery's (Portland, Me.) chairmanship the professional women will sit in at round tables on law, teaching, osteopathy, medicine, library and dietetics discussions.

Judge Emma F. Schofield, of Boston; Gov. John G. Winant, of New Hampshire, and Mrs. Geline MacDonald Bowman, national president of the federation, are the banquet speakers Friday.

A four and a half hour trip to Lost River, the Flume and the Old Man of the Mountain is one of the several interesting features arranged for the following day. That night the banquet speakers will be Miss Marjorie Shuler, corresponding secretary of the organization, and Miss Irina Khrabroff, of New York City and Thetford Hill, Vt., the former talking on "What Is Your Line?" and the latter on "Russian Women Under the Soviet."

Adjournment comes with the luncheon session on Sunday, when Miss Emily R. Kneubuhl, of New York, executive secretary, will make an address. Round table discussions will be completed after breakfast on Sunday morning.

McClain Nuptials Thursday

Miss Aileen McClain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. McClain, of Orlando, Fla., has chosen Thursday as the day for her marriage to Lyle D. Hough, of Scottsdale.

The ceremony will take place in Washington, Pa., with the Rev. W. E. Slemmons, of the First Presbyterian Church, officiating. The bridegroom-elect was tenor in the choir of that church during his four years at Washigton and Jefferson College. He sings in the Point Breeze Presbyterian Church.

Miss McClain has been supervisor of art in the Mt. Lebanon Schools. After June 15 Mr. Hough and his bride will make their home in Midland, Pa., where Mr. Hough is band director and teacher in the Midland High School.

Wellesley Club Luncheon Set

At the Pittsburgh Wellesley Club's annual June luncheon on Saturday in the Long Vue Country Club, the nominating committee will present the names of Mrs. John D. Ballard and Mrs. J. R. Eisaman for president and treasurer.

Hostesses will be Mrs. E. B. Maize, Mrs. J. Boyd Duff, Jr., Mrs. Robert C. Todd, Miss Katherine MacCloskey and Mrs. Arthur B. Van Buskirk.

Kilburn Blaisdell Congress Speaker

Kilburn Blaisdell, young Pittsburgh playwright, is speaking during the Congress Radio Hour, over station KDKA today. Mr. Blaisdell will talk on "Writing a Play."

Sunset Dinner To Have New Features

Although the sunset dinner which will be held at the University Club Saturday evening is continuing a commencement tradition of the University of Pittsburgh, the alumnae committee in charge has announced a distinguishing feature or two in this year's program.

"What Is Your Future, My Pretty Maids?" is the theme of the Rev. Dr. Bernard C. Clausen's address, which he will give to the senior girls and alumnae following the dinner. The program is usually given over to alumnae talent, but instead Miss Mary Kammerer, general chairman of the affair, and Mrs. Jean Wright McLean will introduce alumnae whose outstanding contributions have proceeded through the years of co-education at the university.

Another change is noted in that Miss Martha Burray, harpist, a graduate of Carnegie Institute of Technology, is to be guest musician.

Plum Creek Club Elects Officers

Officers elected for next year by the Plum Creek Valley Woman's Club, are: President, Mrs. J. R. Davis; first vice president, Mrs. Clayton Gray; recording secretary, Mrs. Frank Anderson; treasurer, Mrs. Paul Dean.

Dorothy M. Sloan Is Bride of Dr. Neill

Mrs. and Mrs. Ira L. Sloan, of Emlenton, Pa., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Dorothy M. Sloan, to Dr. John L. Neill, son of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Neill, of Donora, which took place January 27.

The ceremony was solemnized in the Central Presbyterian Church, Chambersburg, with the Rev. Melvin W. Riddle officiating.

Mrs. Neill is a graduate of the Western Pennsylvania Hospital Training School for Nurses and has been employed with the Public Health Nursing Association here. Dr. Neill is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh and of the medical college at the same university. He served as an interne in the West Penn Hospital and is practicing in Connellsburg.

Dr. and Mrs. Neill will be at home in Connellsburg after today.

Parents Entertain For Thelma Glick

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Glick, of Jeannette, Pa., will entertain at 2 o'clock tomorrow in the Jewish Home for Babies for their daughter, Miss Thelma Glick, who was confirmed Sunday into the B'Nai Israel Congregation, for members of her class, and children at the home.

IN PARIS

WITH JANE EADS

Universal Service.

Paris, May 29.—Even though they saw him day in and day out with a beautiful German girl, Emmy Garns, friends of Conklin "Conky" Whitehead, the Atlanta playboy-heir, did not believe he would repeat the marriage vows and react the "dutiful benedict."

But Conky has fooled them, I am privileged to announce, by making the popular Emmy his legal own, secretly marrying her in London and slipping off from Paris the other day for a honeymoon at Baden Baden.

What is more, Conky has bought his blonde bride a magnificent house there, despite warnings of the family lawyer to go easy with the family fortune.

Barton Cuyler, of New York, Conky's playmate, was an unwitting Cupid, introducing the pair several years ago at Monte Carlo.

Best dressed women of the week: Mrs. Arturo Ramos, the former Millicent Rogers, of New York, in a brown goya inspired hat and a brown tweed skirt and waistcoat; Mrs. Frank Wooster in black cobblestone crepe with a Spanish lace collar and a matching lace hat; Mme. Ganna Walska at her Toscanini concert in a black trained gown and black ostrich cape with many pearls.

At the Longchamp race track; Lady Granard, the former Beatrice Mills, of New York, in tobacco brown with a red lacquered straw hat; her daughter, Lady Moira Forbes, in black crepe with sky-blue scarf and beret; Mrs John R. Drexel in red; Baroness Robert De Foucaucourt in a chartreuse yellow dress with a black coat and a large felt hat; Miss Aileen Hennessey in a tailored suit of new black sports net.

E. Berry Wall, whose presence insured the success of every party of the romantic era and who has led many cotillions in New York and European ballrooms, broke a habit the other midnight.

Still fastidious and still tremendously popular in Paris, Berry, solitary and silent, slipped into Harry's New York bar in one of his 300 suits and sipped a few champagne cocktails to "get away" from the mad cavortings of the modern generation.

Puckish Gogo Schiaparelli, 14-year-old daughter of the famous French designer, unbeknownst to her mother, got into mama's workshop and selected the "loudest" materials and designed her own wardrobe for a vacation with the Fritz Bedfords, of New York. Gogo is traveling tourist third with a group of school girls.

* * *

If Mrs. Constance Coolidge buys that grand race horse she has been eyeing she won't be able to get over to the United States to visit her father at York Harbor, Me., in July as planned. The race horse will cost a young fortune, and if she buys it she will cancel the trip, I hear.

* * *

Making money with Mimosa is a favorite trick of Mrs. Eduardo De Mora, of Cannes, the former Lillian P. Martin, of New York. Her rose garden will pay next month's bills.

Lord Ratendone, whose divorced wife was Blossom Forbes Robertson, daughter of Lady Forbes Robertson and niece of Maxine Elliott, is visiting the American actress at her famous Chateu De L'Horizon at Cannes with his fiancee.

Miss Elliott never forgave Blossom for disrupting Lord Ratendone's peace of mind by flying away with an aviation instructor.

Marian Bradley Engaged to Wed J. W. Crawford

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Bradley, of Balph avenue, Bellevue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marian Dyer Bradley, to James Wilson Crawford, son of James S. Crawford, of South Lexington avenue.

Mr. Crawford was graduated from Princeton University and the University of Pittsburgh School of Law.

Aid Society Honors Bertha McCall

Miss Bertha McCall, general director of the National Travelers Aid Association, was honor guest at a luncheon given by the service committee of the Pittsburgh Travelers Aid Society yesterday at the Twentieth Century Club.

DeHout Club Holds Picnic

The first annual picnic of the DeHout Club was held on the farm of Michael Ulmer, Yatesboro, Sunday.

Miss Northcliffe, Brooklyn Man To Marry

June 8 is the date chosen by Miss Doris Northcliffe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Northcliffe, of Trenton avenue, Wilkinsburg, for her marriage to Donald B. Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Campbell, of Brooklyn, N. Y. The ceremony will take place in the Mifflin Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church at 9:30 o'clock.

Miss Esther Northcliffe will be the maid of honor and Charles C. Learzaf will serve as best man.

You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6500 . . . and ASK FOR THE SPYGLASS. Or send in a stamped self-addressed envelope for your reply. THE SPYGLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

Portrait of a girl talking to herself (apologies for Winchelizing!) . . . but we can't help ourselves!

Umm . . . wish we could own ALL the best styles of those cotton evening frocks that one of the stores is showing now for anywhere in the $10.95 vicinity to $19.95. They DO things for one . . . especially anyone 25 and on (anyone under this could go dancing in a gunny sack and still be the belle of the ball)!

Nossuh! We don't like the thoughts of having our toes tramped on by some great galloping male while we dance. . . but what's a girl to do when EVERYTHING in shoe-dom prescribes toe-less, heel-less sandals? Why they're wearing them on the street . . . and it's quite acceptable! Picture your mother ever allowing you to be out in public with something of the kind on your tootsies . . . and then realize that times have changed!

* * *

Mulling over this . . . that even though Elizabeth Arden says that the "beige" girl will be THE girl this summer . . . we personally think it's the bunk! The answer to your "whys" being, that very, very few feminine skins become really beige. They get brown . . . or red . . . or blistered . . . or freckled . . . but rarely beige.

And so you're going to have a big time going the cafe-au-lait shade that's supposed to be "in."

But if you MUST have a try at ruining your skin . . . there are good prepartions to be had for the express purpose to making a painful process a little less so. And lacking these . . . use vinegar. It toughens.

VIEWING THE NEW

More thoughts . . .

MUST get some of that new nail polish. It comes in shades like Violet (palest mauve on the nail and frightfully intriguing with pastel frocks!) . . . Moonbeam (very ingenue!) . . . and Sunburst. We really ought to blow ourself to a bottle of this last. So nice and mahogany-orange . . . so pearly-seeming with its new finish! But it costs $1.50 the bottle. Oh well . . . maybe we can get 6 other people to chip in with us! But how undistinctive to all have nails alike . . . could we bear it!

And tomorrow is Memorial Day . . . Decoration Day we call it—sort of a hangover from our childhood days when we built lemonade stands and paraded around in bunting . . . and hung up Chinese lanterns in the evening! Those, no doubt, were the days!

But THEN . . . you didn't get into the family car and sail merrily off far . . . far away from the woes and wails of the city until you reached a little green and white clapboard cottage where a delicious meal awaited . . . served in an atmosphere of gate-legged tables . . . Windsor chairs . . . chintz . . . and converted oil-burners! (Incidentally . . . this place is a grand one to visit almost any evening or week-end . . . and we'll give you the address if you want it!)

PRESENT ARMY INADEQUATE, DERN TELLS HOUSE GROUP

able for invasion including heavy mobile artillery, tanks and bombing planes. He declared:

"The American government earnestly and sincerely believes that only by following the second path—that of disarmament—can the peace and progress of the world and the national security of each country be truly promoted.

OLD POLICY DANGEROUS

"Unfortunately there is at present a distinct tendency in Europe towards the old policy of political alignments accompanied by an uncontrolled race in armaments, which, if persisted in will recreate the conditions which preceded the World War.

"Those who are today pursuing that policy, rather than one which promotes good will and increases security through a reduction of armaments are inviting a terrible risk for the future."

The United States, Davis said, has repeatedly stated in unequivocal terms its belief in the value of a drastic reduction in armaments and its willingness to join with other powers in bringing armaments down to a level to be determined by the needs of actual self-defense.

To carry out that policy, Davis said, President Roosevelt had authorized him to summarize the attitude and policy of the United States.

LITVINOFF SPEAKS

Litvinoff proposed that the conference be made a permanent body to safeguard the security of all nations and safeguard peace.

He said that the conference now faced the problem of whether it would continue or collapse. He said he believed that the present non-reconciliation of divergent opinion made it impossible to find a solution of the problem of disarmament and declared:

"Armed peace is only an armistice—it is a negation of the basic principle of the Kellogg anti-war pact."

Then he suggested complete renunciation of armaments.

The Soviet official painted the world as seeking goals of national policies and as sometimes undertaking hostilities within the borders of neighboring states.

In suggesting that the conference be made a "permanent conference of peace" he warned the world that this machinery is necessary because there are dangers of a bloody war "or rather a series of wars which include all continents and all humanity."

DAVIS PROGRAM LAUDED BY NYE

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP.)—Chairman Nye (Rep.), of North Dakota, of the special Senate committee investigating the arms traffic, was delighted today to hear the proposal of Ambassador Davis that the United States would be willing to enter a world agreement to reduce or eliminate profits in munitions.

One of the aims of the Senate inquiry is to determine whether a governmental monopoly of the arms and munitions business would be advisable. Nye told reporters:

"Mr. Davis' offer is most fratifying. It has long been my opinion that if munitions profits could be eliminated there would have been removed the greatest threat of all of continuing conflict and threat of conflict.

"No step insuring world peace could be taken that would go further than that proposed today by Mr. Davis."

LOVE LOSS SEEN FOR BARBARA

International News Service.

LONDON, May 29.—Friends of Prince Alexis Mdivani and his bride of less than a year, the former Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, today finally began to suspect the marriage actually had "gone on the rocks."

Although intimates of the couple at first scoffed at reports of trouble between them, events of the past few days have led them to believe that the American heiress has been putting up with much about which she has stoically refrained from confiding even to her closest friends.

Replying to an International News Service wireless message asking about the estrangement reports, Franklin L. Hutton, father of Princess Barbara, sailing aboard the liner Bremen to confer with his daughter here, radioed:

"Can make no statement concerning subject matter your cable until I see parties concerned."

The princess, meanwhile, was confined to her bed in Claridge's Hotel suffering from a nervous breakdown, according to her secretary.

Wife Claims Husband Had Another Mate

Sue Yusko Short has filed a petition seeking annulment of her marriage to George W. Short, 8436 Dearson street, which took place at Wellsburg, June 7 last, averring that Short had a wife living at the time of the marriage. She claims that she lived with Short until June 30, when she discovered the existing marriage.

PU-YI STRICKEN WITH TYPHOID

PEIPING, May 29.—(AP.)—Reports from Chinese sources today said that Emperor Kang Teh, of Manchukuo, formerly Henry Pu-Yi, was stricken ill with typhoid at his palace in Hsinking.

The dispatches added his highness was insisting upon an old style Chinese herb doctor despite the desires of Japanese overlords for a western-trained physician.

The Emperor's will, it is declared, had prevailed, and the herb doctor had been called in only, however, after the Japanese had paid the Chinese physician $50,000 Mexican ($17,500 U. S.) and, in addition, guaranteed his personal safety.

Striking Caddies Boo Golf Players

DES MOINES, Ia., May 29.—(AP.)—Tired businessmen, seeking "peace and good golf scores" at the Hyperion Field Club, found neither.

They became embroiled in a strike of 100 caddies, demanding higher fees. The caddies hissed and booed the golfers and heckled girl caddies who were recruited.

Britain to Seek Debt Settlement On 'Bargain Plan'

By HARRY K. REYNOLDS
International News Service.

LONDON, May 29.—Great Britain is preparing to submit a "bargain proposal" to the United States for settlement of the debts question.

The proposal is now being drafted and will be submitted to the cabinet tomorrow for approval. If approved it will be forwarded promptly to Washington through customary diplomatic channels.

Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, spent a half an hour in conference with King George at Buckingham Palace. Presumably the debts question and the British policy regarding its obligations to the United States was discussed.

It was reiterated in high official quarters today that the recent exchange of notes between President Roosevelt and Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador at Washington, has not altered Britain's fundamental debt policy.

Veterans to Hold Picinc at Wildwood

Members of Voiture No. 5 of the Society of "40 et 8," an organization of veterans taking its name from the famous French boxcar inscription, are making arrangements for a picnic at Wildwood, Pa., Saturday, when they will be hosts to legionnaires from all posts of the American Legion in Allegheny County.

PRESIDENT SETS DEBT MESSAGE

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—President Roosevelt's message to Congress on foreign debts will be transmitted to Congress Friday, it was announced at the White House today.

Mr. Roosevelt expects to write the message en route to Groton, Mass. He will speak at Gettysburg, Pa., tomorrow, and go from there to New York for the fleet review, later going to Groton. He will return to Washington Monday morning.

WAR HEAD ASKS FOR INCREASE IN FORCE

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP.)—Secretary Dern told the House Military Committee today that he believed the Army as at present constituted could not perform its necessary mission of national defense.

In his first appearance before the committee, Dern indorsed a bill by Representative Thompson (Dem.), of Texas, to require an increase from 130,000 to 179,000 in the number of officers and enlisted men.

Making clear that he did not speak for President Roosevelt, Dern said the Army's military functions are:

1—To protect outlying possessions.

2—To train civilians for service in war-time.

3—To repel invaders until new forces could be trained and put in the field.

SPEAKING FOR SELF

Dern testified:

"I don't believe the Army as at present constituted could perform all those functions simultaneously.

"I have become convinced that the Army as at present constituted is below the minimum necessary to carry out its mission."

Dern estimated the increase called for by the Thompson bill would "entail an additional expense of about $35,000,000 a year." He said:

"I am not presenting the views of the administration. I have not seen fit to consult the President. I have not consulted the director of the budget.

"The reason I have not consulted the President is that I knew his desire to balance the budget and any large expenditure might not be in harmony with his program."

'WHOLLY INADEQUATE'

He agreed with Representative May (Dem.) of Kentucky, that the present Army is "wholly inadequate."

Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, added his plea for an "adequate" nucleus around which to build a wartime army. Baker said:

"A generous allowance of officers in peacetime is probably the most important contribution for an emergency that a country can make."

The Thompson bill would direct an increase from 12,000 to 14,063 in the number of peacetime Army officers.

TREATIES BAR CHACO ARMS EMBARGO

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP.)—Obstacles in the form of treaties stood today in the way of concerted action to cut off munitions from Paraguay and Bolivia, battling in the Gran Chaco.

President Roosevelt, in what was called a step unprecedented in American history, issued last night a proclamation outlawing the sale in this country of war materials for the belligerents.

It was the first such step taken during the long and bloody war and it placed the United States definitely in the forefront of other nations in the effort to halt the strife. Thirty-one countries plan to participate tomorrow in a league meeting at Geneva at which a general arms embargo will be discussed.

The President's advisers believed his move might fall short of its goal unless other South American countries joined in the action. Although they are favorably disposed to do so, it was learned, treaties with Bolivia and Paraguay guaranteeing a free flow of commerce are proving a hindrance.

with this famous "miracle cream"

THE smartest dress, the most appealing personality, lose their charm if your complexion is blemished or your hands red and rough.

That's why countless women now use Noxzema Cream regularly—for faces and hands. For Noxzema is a "skin medicine" in cream form—designed especially to correct skin troubles and to restore the skin to normal, healthy beauty.

Ordinary creams fail to correct pimples, oiliness, large pores or blemishes. A medicated cream is needed to purge the skin of clogged impurities—to soothe and heal sore, tender skin—to refine roughened texture. Noxzema does all this!

Use Noxzema Cream every night for a week after removing make-up—and during the day as a powder base. How much softer, smoother, lovelier your complexion will become!

For beautiful hands, too

Noxzema is just as helpful for hands. If your hands are red and rough, make this test. Apply Noxzema on one hand tonight; compare the two hands in the morning. Feel and see how much smoother and whiter is the hand on which you used Noxzema.

Special Anniversary Offer

For a limited time only you can get an economical 25¢ jar of Noxzema at a big saving. For this limited time, the price is reduced to only 15¢! What a marvelous opportunity to gain a clearer, lovelier skin—and smoother, whiter hands as well—for exceptionally low cost!

"Why are Old Golds so uniformly good, so unvarying in throat-ease and flavor?"

asks Joan Blondell

[OLD GOLD SMOKER SINCE 1931]

Dear Miss Blondell:—

We are told that you know how to make a wonderful chocolate cake.

You may not use scientific methods. But we'll wager you measure out each ingredient with unfailing accuracy.

That's how carefully we blend Old Gold tobaccos. In a hundred Old Golds, the proportion of the various kinds of Turkish and domestic tobacco does not vary a fraction of a gram. And every type of tobacco used is of true queen-leaf quality, rich in natural flavor and fragrance.

The same care goes into our manufacturing and packaging, too. For Old Gold must reach you well filled, full weight, and truly factory-fresh.

Sincerely,

SPEAK UP, SISTERS

(© The Sun-Telegraph, 1934.)

:-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-:

By MARION BRUNOT

Both Unhappy Marriage, Divorce Preventable

They're trying to GET ME. These Speak Up, Sisters of mine. I knew they would sooner or later. Every envelope I have picked up, I have said: "It'll be in this one."

And now here it is. A question cooked up to STUMP ME.

They've put their heads together and appointed a committee of one to do the dirty work . . . A CROWD OF GIRLS.

Now, would you think they would do such a thing!

Dear Miss Brunot:

I have been advised by a crowd of girls to ask you your opinion upon which is preferable, A DIVORCE or an UNHAPPY MARRIAGE?

Please give me your opinion on this subject at an earliy date in the Sun-Telegraph.

A SCHOOL GIRL FRIEND.

Miss Brunot

I am much of the opinion that marriage should be considerably more difficult to attain, then half the disagreements would be nonexistant. It is far too easy to become infatuated. Just a moon at the proper angle, a few shadows drifting across the road, and a parked car. And again just a little bit of petting on a side veranda, and a lingering good-night kiss.

THOUGHTFULNESS NEEDED

And more often a loneliness and a meeting, and the hearts go pit-a-pat, and in all these cases a marriage license, a few words by the preacher . . . and then the LONG LIFE ROAD.

Marriage should be a romantic agreement, I admit . . . It should be brought about by lingering glances, and twice held hands, sweet kisses where there isn't too much light . . . and words, thick and honeyed as the product of honest bees.

But also there should be a thoughtfulness. It shouldn't just be a wild performance that leaves two young people so ga-ga that they haven't the least idea whether it is the wedding or funeral march to which they are stepping.

Brides are warned about a dozen different superstitions. Old shoes hurled at the marriage car bring happiness. So does showered rice . . . "Something old . . . something new . . . something borrowed . . . something blue" We've all heard that.

But the trouble is they are not warned sufficiently about differences in temperament . . . About how humble pie should be eaten often . . . About how it is better to love and have it last . . . Even if it does do away with considerable of their own individuality . . . than to see this love run out of the door and down the street and away from them.

SILLY WOMAN

Girls should be taught that failure in marriage is just as bad as failure in anything else.

We read about some movie star who has already selected her fifth husband, and we say: "That's the life . . . " But is it? She's a whimsical, silly little woman . . . making hay out of the affairs of her heart . . . And what really wholesome girl wants to do that?

A woman, old and gray with knuckles all out of shape and shoulders bent, who sits beside a likewise old man and has her photograph taken for her children and grandchildren, and on her fiftieth wedding anniversary, I say such a woman has made more of a success out of her life, than has any of the many Reno-ed divorcees we imagine are such interesting reading.

Playing around is all right. Every girl should have some pleasure that isn't laden with responsibility . . . And she should see to this before she marries. But when she does decide upon the ONE MAN, and he also decides upon her, her MIND as well as her HEART shou'd be serious.

No, sister, I don't believe in divorces. Neither do I believe in unhappy marriages . . . So your argument for me has gone all to slithers. No marriage need be unhappy.

WHAT IS HAPPINESS?

The thing is we all dwell too much upon this thing happiness. What do any of us know about it, anyway? It's evasive at the best. Sit down and write out a formula for it, if you can, and see it hit the rocks right away.

If every married woman in Pittsburgh, in all the world, were to set about to make her ONE MAN happy, and if he in turn were to go about finding out how to bring bliss to the ONE WOMAN, well, there might be considerable contentment blossoming this spring.

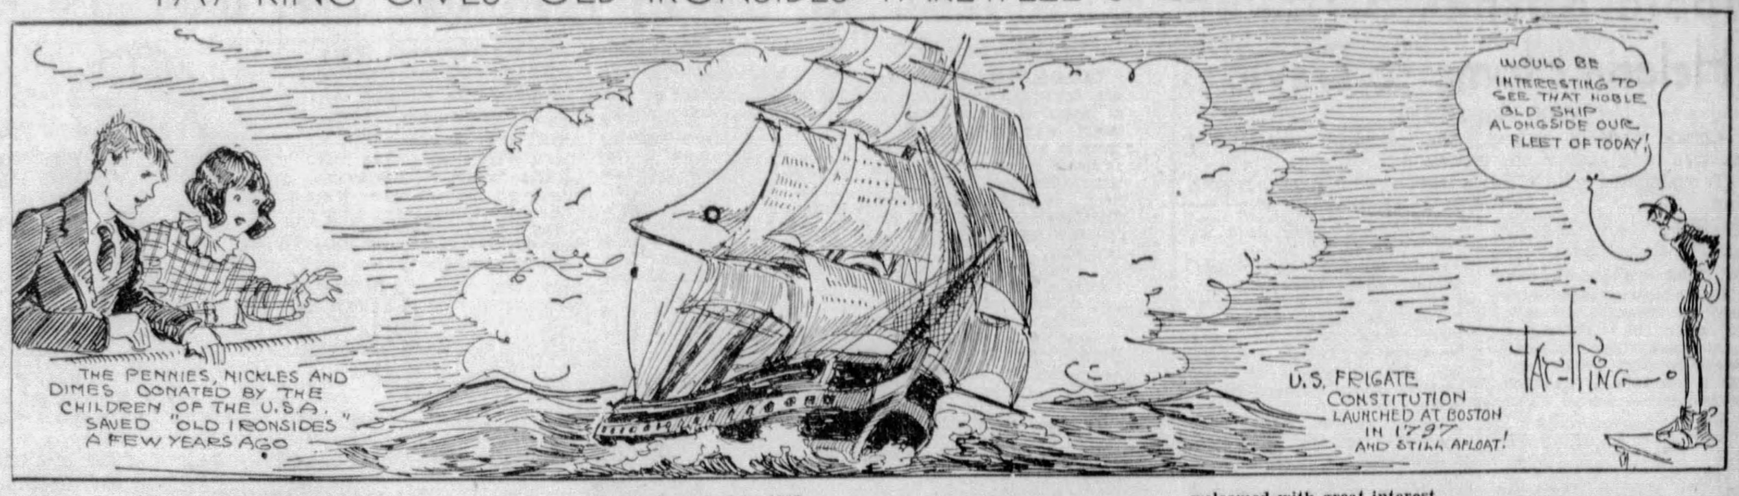
For, after all, happiness for others . . . seeing other eyes, dear eyes, shine brightly . . . feeling little hands, beloved little hands, in your own and craving that touch of yours . . . knowing that Tom or Bill or whatever your man calls himself, needs you . . . well, a sensible woman can make a lot out of all this if she but learns to lean on it.

I'll wager about that time giglios would be sailing on the first boat, Reno wouldn't have a foreign population, and emotional sprees that so many selfish women like, would be on the kibosh.

I quite agree there is nothing else like a home full of disagreements. It is the LIMIT . . . but even LIMITS can be washed out by the wise sister these days.

Miss Brunot will be glad to answer letters submitted to her by readers.

FAY KING GIVES 'OLD IRONSIDES' FAREWELL SALUTE OF AFFECTION



THE PENNIES, NICKLES AND DIMES DONATED BY THE CHILDREN OF THE U.S.A. SAVED "OLD IRONSIDES" A FEW YEARS AGO
WOULD BE INTERESTING TO SEE THAT NOBLE OLD SHIP ALONGSIDE OUR FLEET OF TODAY!
U.S. FRIGATE CONSTITUTION LAUNCHED AT BOSTON IN 1797 AND STILL AFLOAT!
FAY-KING

By FAY KING

Just as our mighty modern fleet moved from the Pacific to the Atlantic, the old frigate Constitution, with fitting ceremonies, went into temporary retirement again at her home port, Boston, where she was launched in 1797.

"Old Ironsides" is dear to the hearts of all Americans, especially the countless children whose pennies, nickles and dimes helped renovate and preserve her a few years ago.

She recently visited 90 United States ports where she was welcomed with great interest.

In 1812 "Old Ironsides" carried 50 cannon and 400 men, and was the most famous warship of her day.

Too bad she couldn't sail down to New York to join the fleet, so that the past and present could meet and salute!

A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Step on Balcony Causes Tense Moment

Lillian's reaction to an emergency or any unusual situation is instantaneous. Hugh's sudden surprising command, "Hush! Switch off the light!" had scarcely left his lips before she, nearest the light, had noiselessly turned the switch and plunged us in darkness.

The curtains were drawn, so there was not even starlight—the moon already had set—to show us Hugh's movements. He is as noiseless as an Indian, and it gave me a distinct shock to hear his whispering voice come next from across the room, beside the French doors leading out to the balcony.

"Are these locked?" he asked.

"Yes," Lillian whispered back. "But you're not going out there!"

There was a decision in her whisper to which I think even a more obstinate man than Hugh would have yielded. But we heard the slightest rustle of a curtain, and knew that Hugh was peering from behind it at the balcony. Then he dropped it again, and though we again heard no sound, his voice next came to us from the chair he had left.

"You can turn on the lights now if you wish," he said.

Lillian switched it on immediately, and even her poise did not prevent her imperious, eager, though low-voiced question.

"What was it?"

"I don't know," Hugh answered quietly. "I am not often mistaken in noises, and I was sure I heard a step on that balcony. But when I reached the window and looked out, there was absolutely nothing to be seen. There was light enough for me to distinguish that the balcony was empty and that there was no light in any other window upon this floor."

EVERYBODY ASLEEP

"There wouldn't be," Lillian answered. "Everybody is asleep, or supposed to be. Now let me think! Everything is so cluttered and jumbled by this wedding! Madge, who have the rooms upon either side of this balcony?"

I waited a second or two to get the arrangement of the rooms clearly in my mind, and then said with sternly repressed excitement:

"The Brixtons upon the right side. Avis Arlen and her mother upon the left, as you face the balcony."

"The Brixtons!" Lillian repeated excitedly. "And Sam, I am sure, knows or suspects what is in that lock box! Do you suppose—"

"I think you should remember," Hugh said judicially, "that the men among the wedding gueses are sleeping at The Larches tonight."

"Yes, that's right," I commented. "Carolyn is sharing her mother's room. No, she isn't, either. I heard Marion ask her to come in and bunk with her."

Lillian rose energetically.

"Did either of you see Sam Bixton go over to The Larches?" she asked tensely.

"Not I," Hugh said promptly and I echoed his negative.

"Then," she said, going to the door, "I'm going to find out whether or not he's in his wife's room. I'll know whether he's there or not, even if he's sworn Helen to secrecy. She's always been an easy book for me to read."

She did not speak boastfully, but as one stating an incontrovertible fact.

COULD SLIDE DOWN

Hugh's voice stopped her as her hand was on the door knob.

"How would it be possible for anyone from either of those rooms to get to the balcony?" he asked. "The windows do not open directly upon it."

"No, they do not," Lillian admitted slowly, "but it wouldn't be much of a trick to put a bed slat or something like that from the window to the floor of the balcony and slide down. Remember we had to discipline the boys for trying just such a stunt?"

I nodded. Indeed, I remembered the lively terror with which I had discovered this particular pastime of Junior and Roderick.

"But," Hugh argued, "that would be all right for a young boy—or—or girl"—I wondered if he were thinking as I was of Avis Arlen's propensity for trying to find out things which did not concern her—"but I cannot imagine Samuel Brixton silding down such a contraption. And—have you figured if it were indeed he upon the balcony, how he managed to get back to his room again noiselessly, and leaving no trace of his presence behind him?"

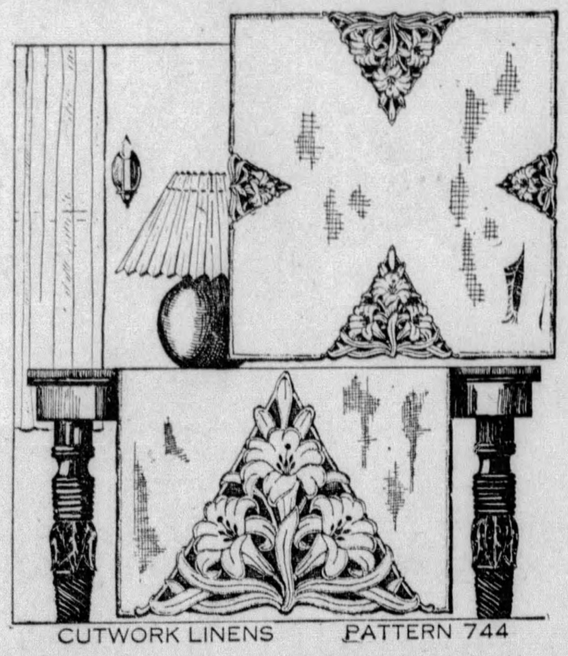
LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS



CUTWORK LINENS PATTERN 744

The lily, that stately flower, has been used to make this unusually beautiful cutwork design, which, besides its effectiveness, has a most desirable feature—it's easy to do! First of all, it is made entirely without bars, doing away with a great deal of the usual work of a cutwork design. Besides that, the design is simple to embroider because of its sweeping lines. It lends itself especially to such linens as scarfs (and what a handsome one for the living room it would make done in white on ecru or in a variety of colors), teacloths, in-between cloths, or a luncheon set. The two larger motifs could be joined to form a diamond-shaped center motif for a table cloth.

Pattern 744 comes to you with a transfer pattern of two motifs 10-13 inches, two motifs 6x7½ inches and six 2½ inch corners; directions for doing cutwork, illustrations of the stitches and yardage requirements.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegaph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York, N. Y.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Operations Need Not Be Feared These Days

In spite of our knowing all about the great advances in medical science and the marked improvement in surgical treatment, most of us become alarmed when told that operative measures are needed. The fear of the "knife" has been handed down to us by our ancestors. In consequence, it is probable many lives are lost because of delay, or by utter avoidance of the needed operation.

Dr. Copeland

The other evening I had dinner with an eminent surgeon. During the course of the conversation we discussed at some length the popular fear of surgery. My friend remarked, what was always my own experience, that whenever he tells a patient he needs an operation, the doctor is asked whether it is a "serious opration."

This is really an embarrassing question and one difficult to answer. It must be admitted there is a certain amount of risk associated with every operation. Fortunately, modern surgery has minimized the dangers and in most instances the risk is negligible. But, certainly, the risk grows greater and the danger is increased when the operation is delayed.

A recent survey of surgical deaths indicates that death after operation may be traced to delay in early recognition of the disease, or the unwillingness of the patient to submit to an operation. Death from appendicitis, for example, continues to take an annually increasing toll. But when the appendix is removed before it is badly infected, the results are extremely good.

No doubt fear of that sort is based upon unfounded stories and exaggeration of the dangers attached to the operation. It is too bad that many persons still dread going to a hospital. Under old time conditions there is no wonder hospitals were feared and shunned. But today the hospital is by all odds the best place for the sick and maimed. It is adequately equipped for all emergencies and every form of treatment. It has the facilities to make the patient comfortable and hasten him along the road to recovery.

Fear of the anesthetic is another cause for worry and anxiety. Yet if you have ever had to take one, I am sure you will agree with me that it is indeed a harmless and simple procedure. Present day methods are quite different from those used a quarter of a century ago when the danger from the anesthetic was as great as from the operation itself.

Bear in mind that throughout the country thousands and thousands of cases are operated on every day without accident or bad result. As I have said, the danger is in delay. If you have been advised to have an operation do not delay it. With modern surgical skill it is possible to operate and repair diseased tissues so that complete recovery may be realized and health restored.

Correct Manners

Appreciation Notes

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am about to become a mother. Recently kind friends have had three different showers for me. At each of these showers I thanked these friends graciously, but now I would like to show my great appreciation by sending each one a little note of thanks. Would this be proper? If so, please tell me how to word such a note, and if it would be correct to send it on a correspondence card in an envelope, or would it be better to use folded note sheets. In the latter case, do you write it on the front or on the inside sheet? N.

Good—I'm so glad that you have decided to write these notes of thanks to these kind friends who have been so generous to you. Not only is the writing of these notes "proper," but such gestures are expected of us if we wish to be considered "appreciative people."

Correspondence cards aren't very much used now, and I think that the reason is that they so obviously limited our expression of the messages on them. The double half-sheets, known as semi-note-paper, have taken the place formerly held by correspondence cards. So I suggest you use either this semi-note-paper or the usual letter-paper when you write these notes of thanks. Begin your letter on the first page, then write on the back page, and then, turning the sheet around, use the two inside pages as one. Or, if your note isn't to be as long as this, write first on the first page, and then on the inside pages as one.

Thank first for the generous thought, and then chat about the gift, with enthusiastic expression. Like this:

Dear Mary:

How kind you were, and how generous, to think so beautifully of me and my coming baby. Thank you, with all my heart, for your goodness to me, and for the absolutely perfect little bonnet for "She-Him." It is a dream bonnet, and I can't wait to put it on the little head . . . I'm sure that the baby will be as proud of it as I am, and delighted with its loveliness.

It was such a joy seeing you at the shower, and do come to see me whenever you have a minute.

Dearest love and deepest thanks,

Devotedly,

JANE.

Contract Bridge -:-

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Refusing a Trick

Of course, the fundamental purpose of the play at Contract Bridge is to win the tricks necessary to fulfill the contract. It does not, however, follow as a matter of course that the Declarer should win every trick that is offered to him or win at the first possible opportunity.

An interesting example of refusing to win the first round of a suit and thereby assuring the fulfillment of a redoubled contract occurred in a recent rubber game at Crockford's Club, New York, in which the holder of the South hand below was Stephen Lynch, long a commanding figure in the motion picture industry in the United States.

1—The East player felt that his Opening bid was justified upon his distribution and strategically also as a defense for the part-score.

2—South's hand is almost strong enough to justify the bidding of two spades.

3—West, with his 1½ honor-tricks and adequate trump support, hopes that North and South are in trouble.

4—The natural response, holding one-plus honor-trick and possibly a double stopper in the adversely bid suit.

5—East now awaits developments.

6—South decides not to temporize. As a matter of fact, he has intended to play the hand at four hearts, if possible, from the beginning.

7—West feels that he has two sure trump tricks and a possibility of three, and hence, as his partner has opened the bidding, that his opponents should be defeated.

8—South feels that, at worst, he should not lose over four tricks. His partner's bid of no-trump encourages him to hope that he can fulfill the contract and thus the Redouble is well worth while.

West's opening lead was the diamond King, and Mr. Lynch, after studying the Dummy, declined to play the Ace. This, as it developed, was the key play to the entire hand. Had the Ace been played to the first trick, Mr. Lynch could not have fulfilled his contract. West's Double was based upon the assumption that his partner held either the Ace or Queen of diamonds and thus would be able to give him an additional trump trick in addition to the two sure ones which he held. If this were true, the defeat of the contract was assured.

However, Mr. Lynch refused to be ensnared. He let the King of diamonds hold, and when West led a low diamond, played the Ace. He was completely resigned to the loss of two trump tricks, and unless West held all five adversely held trumps, he could hold his loss to two by this method of play—in other words, refusing to give East an opportunity to lead the diamonds through him.

Winning the second trick with the Ace of diamonds, Mr. Lynch led the singleton heart from Dummy and took the finesse. While it seemed improbable that East had made the Penalty Double with only three, nothing could be lost by taking the finesse so long as it was impossible for East to gain the lead. The finesse, of course, failed, and West now led a spade. Mr. Lynch ruffed, laid down the Ace of trumps and followed with the Jack. West won this trick, but it was his last. When Mr. Lynch regained the lead he drew the last trump, and the remaining tricks were taken with trumps and clubs.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

During the last few years there has developed a strong bond between hair dressers and milliners. They are working together in the cause of pulchritude. Feminine heads put up a good show, and that means that feminine hearts are glowing.

The hat is the most important detail of dress. The wrong selection of a chapeau will turn a raving beauty into a caricature. She who is out stalking a new helmet must regard it critically in front, sides and rear. Only a certain percentage of hat hunters can get away with the sassy piquant model. Others must play safe with more conservative modes.

Good taste, of course, will never err. After finding the special treasure, there is the business of wearing it smartly. Also having the coiffure so arranged that it displays itself and the hat to advantage.

Mark my words, ladies of the beauty chorus, it isn't the woman who spends the most money who puts up the most elegant appearance. Not a-tall. It is the femme who is well assembled, not put together piecemeal. She doesn't tear around the shopping race track, fling coin of the realm with recklessness and unconcern. She thinks of her face, figure, complexion, hair and raiment as elements of one composition which must be harmonious.

She endeavors to run true to her own type. That is not the case with the woman who has the face of a madonna and the tresses of a witch, or the one with the feather bed shape who wears a juvenile hat, or the grandma person way past 60 who buys her frocks in the misses' department.

Blessed with good taste and unfailing judgment any woman can put up a chic and distinguished appearance. Yes, and for a small outlay of money.

"spring fever" time is here

...and what does it mean to you?

JUST THIS: If you feel listless, tired, run-down, appetite dull, with a weak, let-down feeling... perhaps nervous and worn out... why not make an effort to "snap out" of this condition?

Try toning up your appetite... increasing your red-blood-cells—get in step with those who put zip and pep into everything they do... the best way to be happy and cheerful.

Colds, the "flu," or other illness, and poisons accumulated during the winter months, often diminish the number of red-blood-cells which are so vital in maintaining vigor... strength ...and a clear skin.

You need a tonic—

not just a so-called tonic... but a tonic that will tone up your blood... bring back to normal its red-cells... build up its hemo-glo-bin... stimulate the gastric juice flow. S.S.S. is specially designed to do this for you.

Perhaps your blood is the cause of your trouble... it frequently is. Try S.S.S.... take it just before meals. Unless your case is exceptional you should soon notice a pick-up in your appetite... your color... skin... pep ...and energy should improve as your oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin increases.

S.S.S. is truly a blood and body invigorating tonic. Its value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal, and it is especially good as a Spring tonic.

CHICKIE'S DAUGHTER :-: A Thrilling Serial Of Modern Romance :-: By ELEANOR MEHERIN

Pippin Rushes Stricken Helena Home to David

CHAPTER LXXXII.

Chickie made no protest. She looked up with fevered eyes, then sank against the pillows.

It reminded Pippin of Bill's lassitude. It filled her with dread.

She walked out to the porch, waiting blindly for Dadee to appear; trying to plan; yet longing for the moment when David would take Helena in his arms and remove this terirble burden of anguish from her heart.

Jonathan stood beside her.

"Is it necessary to take your mother home? She doesn't seem so ill."

"David thinks so. He's frightened!"

"Then let us start! Leave the boys here, Pippin. They can pack and close up the house. Let Nellie stay with them. You and I will take her home!"

Jonathan's tone, the words he used rang with foreboding. But everything afflicted her. Even the purple shodaws now sweeping along the cliffs and making indistinct the harsh magnificence of the mountains.

A light flashed along the trail. Dadee came rushing up the stones. The young boy was shaking and filled with remorse.

"I can walk," Chickie said.

She tried. After a little, when it was obvious the effort was too great, Dadee and Dale lifted her in their arms. They carried her to the boat.

She saw Bruce standing on the pier. The freckles stood out on his white, frightened face.

"Do what Dadee tells you," Chickie said weakly. But when Dadee answered: "Don't worry, Helena, I won't let him out of my sight," she only nodded with that remote, indifferent look the very weak or the very ill cast upon a vanishing world.

Start for Home

They swept across the faintly glowing twilight waters into the vast, unending purple gloom. Pippin kept her arms about her mother but was afraid to look at the drawn, ashy face and closed quivering lids.

"I would so gladly drive for you," Dale said.

"I'd rather," Pippin answered. "It's something to do!"

Her eyes rested a moment on Dale's face; then on the far, lofty peaks, rising sharp and black against the pale, luminous sky. Dale and her fever of longing were now distant as the mountains.

Chickie rested against old Jonathan's shoulder. The dark gathered quickly on the narrow, high-walled mountain road. She felt driven through storm and waste.

She whimpered bitterly: "Oh so rough. Pippin—stop it!"

"I'm going as easily as I can, mother."

The faint, petulant cries punctured the dark on the 100-mile drive to Sacramento. They were wounded sounds. They made Pippin feel weak. She had never heard her mother complain before.

It was just 10 o'clock when Pippin drove up to the Senator Hotel. Before she had parked the car, she caught sight of her father.

He came swiftly, saying as he passed: "Good! How is she?" but did not wait for Pippin's answer.

David opened the door of the tonneau. He leaned over and said gently:

"Well—Helena! Not feeling so fine?"

Tries to Smile

Her fevered, apprehensive eyes met his and tried to smile.

David took her hand. He looked at her with quiet intensity.

"Dear, would you be more comfortable if you could stretch out a bit?"

Pippin saw her mother's eyes contract darkly.

"An ambulance? No! Please! I'm all right! Can't we go on?"

"Right away—I'll get my things."

But David gave Pippin a sign.

Her father had a blanched, hurried look, and his eyes narrowed. He asked her questions. Then he gave her a paper with a phone number.

"Call up Miss Downs. Tell her to make the arrangements I spoke of. We'll be at the house before 1 o'clock."

"Is she very sick, Dad? What do you think it is?"

"I can't say . . . perhaps nothing . . . we'll just be on the safe side." He looked into her young, driven face, appearing so small with the wildly burning eyes. "Don't get alarmed. You did good work and in good time!"

But in the adjoining booth as Pippin waited for her number, she heard David calling Dr. Meyer; heard him say:

"God—I don't know—looks like it!"

But when she assailed him with her questions and her frightened accusing eyes, he answered:

"Nonsense—I was talking of a patient."

Pippin drove home. Old Jonathan, grown suddenly so mighty, sitting at her side and David in the tonneau with Chickie in his arms.

Jonathan leaned down and said, confident, in Pippins ear: "See—she's not complaining. She's all right now!"

But there was something in David's look, something in the way he lifted Chickie from the car, tender and blindly defiant, that filled Pippin's mind with doom.

Doctors Consult

The house was all lighted. Helena's room was ready. There were nurses.

Then Dr. Meyer called and another. They talked a long while in David's study.

Pippin crept to the door of her mother's room. She went in and looked at her. Her face was dull except for the hot eyes and a red dash near her temples.

Helena said with resentment: "My head!" But when the nurse came with a cold pack, she ordered her away.

"You may as well go to bed, Pippin," David said.

"Won't you please tell me what you're going to do? I'm no child! I'm only more worried not knowing."

"I'll tell you as soon as we decide."

She went to her room. But she knew her father and the other doctors were with her Mother. They were hours with her.

Pippin sat in the chair near her window. She fell asleep. At four o'clock in the morning she awakened. A red moon came through the Golden Gate. It dropped low, touching the hills near Point Bonita and leaving a great glowing disk on the water.

She heard muffled voices in the hall; her father and Jonathan.

Pippin stole to the door. She recoiled, seeing David's face. All her fears were realized.

He looked at her out of dark, goaded eyes.

"Why didn't you go to bed, Pippin?"

She answered, sobbing: "I know! You did a spinal puncture, didn't you?"

"Yes—we did."

There was no need to ask further. Pippin raised a limp hand and brushed it slowly across her eyes while the dread, terrible picture of a dead Helena; a fearfully crippled Helena stalked into her frantic heart.

Infantile paralysis.

"So it's sure?"

David put an arm about her. He said in a thick strained tone:

"It may not be so bad! Please go to bed. It's going to be a hard pull. Will you take this now and sleep as long as you can?

"Can I go and look at her, David?"

"Oh, better not—she doesn't care!"

The whole world seemed blotted away in gray, dreary fog.

Agonizing days passed.

Pippin stole often to her mother's bed. All the delicate beauty was gone from Helena's face. One day Helena said to her: "Look—it has no power!" and pointed to her motionless right arm.

"They expected this. It's nothing. It will pass!"

But Pippin walked about her own room, weeping.

David said: "Will you wire to Kevin? Ask him to fly home. They need him at the office."

"But she seems better. The fever is gone."

Pippin said this to still the blind terror in her own heart. Her father didn't answer. He said absently:

"Should we send for Jon? Jon would want to come."

"Oh Dad—that sounds so hopeless. As though Helena might die."

He said quiet, yet in the same mad, absent tone: "Don't say it. She will not die."

But he didn't leave the house. He never left Helena's side.

Pattern 1844

Sun-Telegraph 15c Pattern

It is obviously a very attractive frock—anybody can see that—but what does not appear at a glance is the amazing effect it has on your figure. It does the most delightful things to the lines, straightening out a curve here and covering up one there until a woman has become as slender as her daughter. The cape-collar was a veritable inspiration. So smart it might just have stepped out of one of the great French dressmaking houses and so very, very flattering. It makes such a stunning model in print we hate to suggest another fabric—but it can be done—very well!

Pattern 1844 is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3⅝ yards 39-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

THERE IS SWISH AND SWANK IN TAFFETA

By PRUNELLA WOOD

TAILORINGS IN taffeta are consuming the interest of many excellent designers lately, with the result that there is a great rustling and swishing to be heard in the late afternoon and after dark. It is one of the most delectable compromises effected in the daylight saving campaign: you get elegance and quiet good taste in one ensemble. Moreover, it has turned out to be a style that is useful to youngster and matron alike, for this fabric lends itself to naive or worldly designs with equal credit.

SHOT TAFFETA, that fabric which looks like one tint in one light, and quite another in different glow, is a revival in this genre. Navy blue shot with emerald green and accompanied with navy accessories makes a very wearable ensemble for cafe trotting. Checked taffetas, or those that have a tiny jacquard motif sprinkled through them in flower tones, are just as useful. Suits and frocks of this sort are patterned after tailored suits usually made from sheer wool or silk, so that they get by in daylight or electric radiance; they look lovely when worn with a fur neckpiece.

IN THE strictly evening ensembles, the really long skirt is a trade mark. Black with delicate lingerie for the blouse—which is usually attached bodice-wise to the skirt is a favorite. Brown, with a shirt of coral or turquoise taffeta, is characteristic of another type, and there have been some stunning gray models which sported blouses of matching net or embroidered batiste.

One could rustle into any evening gathering wearing this black taffeta dinner ensemble. It has a lingerie blouse finished with a flat ruffle, a bolero with flaring stiffened sleeves and a taffeta cord belt.

Left, a youthful afternoon suit of checked taffeta with a pinched waistline, buttons, belt and bow which are very tailored, and a jauntyl shortish skirt. Center, a honey for the semi-formal occasion in pin check taffeta. Note the loose box line of the short jacket and the loose three-quarter sleeve. The tabs are white pique coming square under the drawstring front neckline. A band of the pique borders the neckline in back.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Just watch how soon we will be wearing the large hat. A wide-brimmed mushroom with a shallow crown, is of black Milan, and is trimmed in front with a cluster of pink rosebuds framed in a ruche of black satin.

Buy a coat, even if you do like suits. For there are occasions that call for a frock and coat. A grand model is a double-breasted coat of light-grey woolen, with a narrow ribbed surface. It has wide revers of silver fox.

Pick daisies as one of the most liked of the floral prints. A new dinner suit is of black taffeta with a large daisy print in white, yellow and green. The jacket is loose with a tiny band of white daisies at the cuff. Bands of white daisies also mark the neckline and edge the belt of the frock.

Back again comes georgette for enchanting afternoon frocks. A model in black georgette, with a bodice and sleeves of horizontal tucking, has sleeves lined with pink satin and a width of the pink satin just below the long, shallow neckline.

Just a handful but ever so smart and useful is a new evening vanity. It has a loose powder container, rouge, comb, day and evening lipstick, mirror, cigaret holder, matches and place for money. It is a velvet roll with a border and fastening of strass.

Any day now the first linen suits will make their appearance. An advance model shows a tailored suit of pale gray linen with notched lapels and a set-in yoke. It is worn with a blouse of red handkerchief linen made with a cow-boy scarf of the red and gray linen.

To Remove Rust

Rust can be removed from iron or steel by rubbing vigorously with fine coal ash moistened with olive oil.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

We are going to play some tennis pretty soon, fellows!

Have you been noticing what fine weather we are having. How does that old poem go—"What is so rare as a day in June? Then if ever come perfect days!"

If the weather could stay the way it has been lately, fellows, we would prefer the month of May!

There's something about nice weather that is encouraging. A fellow feels better when the sun shines bright and the air is balmy and pleasant.

You notice that Junior and his gang are still trying to get their baseball team started. We are betting that they will succeed all right.

But we hope that some Junior Patrol members will learn to play tennis this summer, too. Or if you know how to play already, we hope that you will practice some more and learn to be an extra good player.

There are courts in the city parks where you can play free.

And there are many fine courts elsewhere. The game is the best kind of exercise and a real thrill. When you hit the ball, and it flies straight and true where you want it to go for your point, you always feel pretty good about it!

Of course, now and then you miss it, and your friend on the other side of the net makes the point.

If you are not old enough to play tennis yet, and some of those games that grown-ups play, you can have a swell time at the playground. There are swings and "jungles" and see-saws and many things that are a lot of fun.

Best of all, you don't have to play in the street where there is danger that a car might hit you.

We would like to get letters from more Junior Patrol members telling us what they are going to do when vacation starts. How will they spend the summer, here at home or at the seashore, mountains or farm?

This is the nesting season for many birds, fellows. We hope that you are helping the birds to raise their babies so that there will be more birds than ever. Above all, never touch a bird's nest or destroy it. The birds, that eat bugs and worms on trees and crops, are our friends.

Household Hints

Thin pieces of soap can be kneaded on to new piece and so used to the very last.

Tissue paper dipped in milk and put over jam pots will dry like parchment and keep jars airtight.

U. S. LOSES IN COURT BATTLE WITH WEIRTON STEEL

involved and the defendant is a party thereto.

"The bill further charges that the defendant was guilty of acts of coercion and intimidation against employes when they were exercising or seeking to exercise their right of electing representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining.

"Defendants, therefore, was a party to a labor dispute. By reason of such acts the bill prays relief against the defendant. As this is a case involving or growing out of a 'labor dispute' and the defendant is a 'party' to that dispute against whom relief is sought, this court is without jurisdiction to issue a temporary injunction in such case unless the testimony of witnesses is heard in open court with opportunity for court examination."

The judge pointed out that the government's assertion of fact are seriously contradicted by the Weirton Steel Company.

QUESTIONS LEGALITY

Judge Nields wrote in the opinion which is destined to go down as one of the significant court rulings in the nation's history:

"In this case the essential elements of the bill and the plaintiff's affidavits in support of its motion are denied and contradicted by the defendant's answer and affidavits. Two hundred and thirty-four affidavits were filed by the plaintiff and 826 by the defendants.

"Obviously the case is controlled by the rule repeatedly announced in this district and circuit that an injunction is never granted where the pleadings and affidavits disclose that the plaintiff's contentions in fact and in law are seriously disputed.

"The case illustrates perfectly the propriety of the procedure prescribed by Congress and the futility of considering a motion for a preliminary injunction in cases of this kind upon ex parte affidavits.

"Not only is there a conflict of material facts, but there are serious intricate questions of law involved, and particularly the question as to the constitutionality of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

"Counsel in their briefs have given intensive and careful consideration to this constitutional question. Issues of the greatest importance are raised and should be determined only after final hearing."

DENIES MOTION

Describing the action upon which he handed down his historical ruling, Judge Nields declared:

"The bill prays for an order restraining the defendant from violating the labor sections of the code of fair competition for the iron and steel industry approved by the President on August 19, 1933, through the means prescribed in the bill of complaint or otherwise."

After reviewing the hearings conducted by him, and the testimony taken, Judge Neilds then concluded with:

"The motion must be denied."

The order handed down by Judge Nields today came as a climax to the first important court test of the National Recovery Act.

The ruling was considered almost certain to exert an effect on the grave crisis confronting the steel industry as a whole. Whether or not it will speed up unionization of the industry's thousands of workers is a question which may be determined within the next few weeks.

A struggle of gigantic scope looms in this basic industry. Leaders of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, American Federation of Labor Union, have demanded recognition of their organization. If the companies do not recognize the union by June 10, a strike throughout the industry will be called, leaders of the labor organization have threatened.

Charles M. Schwab and other barons of the industry have defied the Amalgamated, indicating they will fight to the bitter end all efforts to unionize the rank and file of steel workers.

Judge Nields' ruling culminated a long-drawn out controversy between the government and Weirton Steel, a subsidiary of National Steel Corporation. Beginning last autumn the struggle was waged furiously between the National Labor Board, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and the entire recovery administration on one side, and Ernest T. Weir, head of Weirton Steel, and his board of directors on the other.

The eyes of the nation were fixed on this controversy because it was generally believed that on the outcome depended the validity of the collective bargaining and other labor sections of the national recovery law. Indeed, the validity of the law itself has been widely regarded as the stake in this historic struggle.

The bone of contention in the battle between the government and Weirton Steel has been the form of employe representation in the concern's three large plants. Claiming that a majority of the company's workers were in favor of the company union, Weirton held elections of employe representatives for collective bargaining last December. Company union representatives won.

ELECTIONS OUTLAWED

These elections were outlawed by the National Labor Board and the recovery administration after Weir and the company officials had refused to permit the government to supervise the balloting.

Before and after the disputed elections were held there had been a constant interchange of communications between Gen. Johnson, Senator Robert F. Wagner, chairman of the labor board, and Weir. Threats and accusations were hurled by both camps, while leaders of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers supported the government and charged that the company was intimidating its workers to impose upon them the company union plan.

Numerous proposed compromises were thrown into the discard, the Weirton Steel Company clinging stubbornly to its stand that its treatment of employes did not constitute violation of the law and that government interference in the relations between employers and employes is unconstitutional.

Finally the controversy reached an impasse and the government last March filed its suit asking for an injunction against the steel company.

Weir: 'I am Pleased'

E. T. WEIR, BOARD CHAIRMAN . . . . . "I AM PLEASED"

WEIR 'PLEASED' OVER VERDICT

E. T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation, today issued from his office here a brief statement regarding the refusal of the Federal District Court in Delaware to grant an injunction in the Weirton Steel case. He said:

"I have just been advised that Judge Nields has handed down his decision in our favor, but I have not seen the decision itself and consequntly am in no position to make comment. I understand, however, that the decision justifies our position on the facts in our controversy with the National Labor Board. Needless to say, I am pleased."

Weir was in New York when he learned of the decision.

1,500 MINERS ON 'HOLIDAY'

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., May 29. — (AP. — Approximately 1,500 miners from three workings remained out of the pits today, protesting against discharges and the activities of rival unions.

About 500 employes of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company's Vesta Mine No. 5 walked out yesterday, demanding the reinstatement of a discharged foreman.

In contrast to this, 400 men are on "holiday" at the West Penn Power Company's mine, demanding the discharge of a foreman.

About 800 men walked out of the Isabella mine of the Weirton Steel Company yesterday as a result of a dispute between rival unions. A fight preceded the walkout in which two men were injured.

PALL THROWN OVER STRIKE CONFERENCE

By JOHN P. COWAN
Sun-Telegraph Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Officials of the National Labor Board and leaders of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers opened a conference here today in an effort to avert a strike in the steel industry were thrown into the doldrums by the news flashed from Wilmington that the United States District Court for Delaware had decided against the government in the Weirton Steel feud.

So sudden and unexpected was the decision that neither the Labor Board nor Amalgamated men were prepared to predict its immediate effect on the entire national situation.

UNION STANDS FIRM

John Tighe, Louis Leonard, A. W. Miller and Thomas J. Gillis, of the Amalgamated, were waiting in the Labor Board conference chamber when the news arrived. Gillis said:

"This is a setback for the government, but it does not alter the situation as far as we are concerned with our work at hand with the Labor Board. We have been called here to confer on employment matters in dispute in the steel industry and shall continue our stand."

In both Houses of Congress the opinion was expressed that the decision would hasten action on the labor bill introduced by Senator Wagner and that it would be so framed as to give the Labor Board gfreater powers and mandatory authority in enforcing collective bargaining.

WAITS TEXT OF DECISION

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, advised of the decision by long-distance telephone, said:

"The decision in refusing the temporay restraining order does not affect the main case. When I have had an opportunity to study the text of the decision I can then say whether we shall appeal or proceed to try the suit.

"The judge has made it plain in his decision that the facts are too controversial and so many denials and counter denials are made that the court does not feel that discreation should be exercised in the premises, at least until the absolute facts are known."

The Attorney General indicated his belief that the refusal of the temporary injunction is merely the "opening skirmish" in the litigation, and said he would issue a formal statement in the government's behalf as soon as he could read the entire text of the decision.

Steel Masters Meet to Revise Code

International News Service.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Directors of the American Iron and Steel Institute met here today with Donald Richberg, general counsel of the NRA, to take action on revision of the steel code.

The draft of an agreement was before the session after NRA officials and a special committee of the industry worked out changes involving the basing point system and price posting.

New cities are to be included in the basing point system, the principal target of opposition by steel users, and Duluth and Detroit are expected to be added.

Any amendments must be ratified by 75 per cent of the industry to be effective. If ratification is obtained, the agreement will be rushed to President Roosevelt for signature.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP.)—Hope that the revised steel code would require recognition of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers was expressed today by Michael F. Tighe, of Pittsburgh, president of the organization, prior to his conference with Senator Wagner, chairman of the National Labor Board. Tighe said:

"We are basing all our plans for the future on the hope that the code will contain a clause requiring recognition of the union."

He said, however, he had received no indication of what the new code, agreed to by the NRA and steel operators to replace the present code expiring May 31, would contain. It has yet to be approved by President Roosevelt.

Wagner called Tighe to the conference in view of Tighe's threat to call a general steel strike in June as a protest aganist what the union head calls the failure of the steel operators to observe the collective bargaining provisions of the recovery act.

Gov. Rolph Weakens In Fight for Life

SAN FRANCISCO, May 29.—(AP.)—Gov. James Rolph, Jr., of California, is growing "progressively weaker" in his fight for life, his personal physician, Dr. Harold E. Fraser, said today.

Strike at Bakery Over Union and Pay

Deadlocked in negotiations for union recognition and a 10 per cent increase in wages, approximately 150 employes of the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company, 3212 Liberty avenue, today went on strike.

Officials of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers International Union declared officials of the company had refused to accord the union full recognition and grant a wage increase of 10 per cent. Negotiations, however, were still going forward today.

Urge Amendments To Wagner Bill

The Pittsburgh League for Social Justice is urging amendments in the recently revised Wagner bill, arguing that the labor compromise measure as reported out of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor will "sound the death knell" to labor's right to organize. In a letter to Senators David A. Reed and James J. Davis, the league charged greater discrimination against union workers than before, and asked that the proposed bill be changed to outlaw all company unions.

TOLEDO STRIKE PEACE SNAGS

TOLEDO, May 29.—(AP.)—The movement toward a general strike in Toledo industry grew today as Charles P. Taft, federal mediator, blamed the failure of negotiations in the turbulent automotive strike on the three companies involved.

One week from the time riots broke out at the Electric Auto-Lite Company, mediation efforts were at a stalemate.

A committee of 23, formed within the Central Labor Union, which is composed of local affiliates of the American Federation of Labor, will meet Thursday to consider further the general strike proposal.

Taft said the Electric Auto-Lite Company, the Logan Gear Company and the Bingham Stamping and Tool Company refused a truce plan, objecting to two points, on both of which union leaders had signified approval.

The only projected step in further negotiations was Taft's plan to meet today with the Auto-Lite workers' group, which strikers have called a company union.

VOTE ON REALTY CODE BOARD

The National Association of Real Estate Boards today announced real estate brokers throughout the United States will vote for members of the code authority for the real estate brokerage industry in a mail ballot from today until June 7, inclusive.

The election is to be conducted by a committee selected by the National Association of Real Estate Boards. Eight members will be selected by realtors and three by industry members who are not members of any real estate board affiliated with the national association.

Industry members not members of any real estate board may obtain ballots from the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, 335 Second avenue, Pittsburgh. Ballots will be mailed to members of real estate boards affiliated with the national association by the election committee.

Peace Debate Halts Dock Strike Rioting

SAN FRANCISCO, May 29.—(AP.)—Rioting on Pacific Coast waterfronts, in which police used guns and gas, gave way to new peace hopes today as striking longshoremen considered an "olive branch" proposal for ship owners.

The compromise plan came while injured were being carried from the scenes of rioting yesterday. It would grant recognition to the International Longshoremen's Association and joint operation of hiring halls at all ports. One clause, however, declares for the "open shop."

NRA Plans Extension Of Home Rule on Codes

Recovery Officials Studying Proposal Deny Collapse

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP.)—NRA, which has just granted a measure of home rule to cleaners, barbers and five other service trades, soon will take further steps to simplify its job.

Recovery officials studied these steps today while denying emphatically opposition declarations that NRA is "cracking up."

Senator Schall (Rep.), of Minnesota, and Representative Britten (Rep.), of Illinois, both contended the home rule order heralded a collapse.

Further measures to lighten the burden of regulation are expected to deal principally with the 500 to 600 small codes yet to be approved.

Hugh S. Johnson feels that most of these have been requiring time and expense out of all proportion to the benefits to labor or industry.

Johnson to Continue As Administrator Extended Period

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP.)—Administration sources reaffirmed today there was no expectation of Hugh S. Johnson's early departure from NRA.

Published reports to the contrary (not carried by the Associated Press) led to inquiries at both the White House and NRA. It was made plain that the administrator does not consider his work on the recovery program anywhere near in shape to turn over to a successor and has made plans to remain at the helm for a further extended period.

There has been no indication that President Roosevelt wished to supplant him with anyone else, especially with the development of new policies now under way in the code making sections of NRA and extensive strike threats.

A continuing turnover in the subordinate personnel at NRA has been in progress for some time and is expected to continue.

Which ticket to CALIFORNIA would you buy?

HERE are two summer roundtrip tickets to California. Both cost the same. One takes you straight to Los Angeles and back on the same route. The other takes you to New Orleans, then to Los Angeles on our famous Sunset Limited across the picturesque Old South and the Southwest, then up the coast to San Francisco and the Pacific Northwest, and back home on a northern U.S. or Canadian line. The first ticket shows you one narrow strip of the West. The other shows you the whole Pacific Coast and a different part of the West each way. Both cost the same. Which ticket would you buy?

Our four leading trains to California—Golden State Limited, Sunset Limited, Overland Limited and Cascade—approach California through four entirely different scenic regions. By going West on one of these trains and returning on another you make a roundtrip that is really round, yet the rail fare is not 1¢ higher!

COOL WEATHER ALL THE WAY!

Club cars, lounge cars, room cars, dining cars and observation cars on the Golden State Limited, Sunset Limited, Overland Limited and Cascade will be air-conditioned this summer.

Our dining cars serve delicious "Meals Select"—complete luncheons and dinners for 80¢ to $1.25, breakfasts for 50¢ to 90¢.

CALIFORNIA AND BACK $107.10 45-day limit

—good on all trains leaving May 15 to Oct. 15. Ticket with Oct. 31 limit costs a little more. Still lower fares good in tourist Pullmans and chair cars west of Chicago and New Orleans. Pullman charges are much lower than last summer.

VARIED DECORATION DAY RITES FOR SOLDIER DEAD

LEGION JOINS PROTEST ON RED PARADE

Marshall Says Permit For March Won't Be Revoked

The American Legion and the Sons of the American Revolution today had added their protests to those of other patriotic organizations in attempts to prevent Communists from holding a parade tomorrow afternoon on the South Side.

A permit for the parade, issued on May 14, will not be revoked if the paraders are orderly, Police Supt. Ben R. Marshall declared yesterday after a protest by the Federated Patriotic Orders allied with the Grand Army of the Republic. In a resolution submitted to Marshall and Mayor McNair, the group termed the proposed parade a "desecration of Memorial Day."

The Legion's protest was sent to Public Safety Director A. Marshall Bell by George E. Grimm, county commander, after a meeting of the executive committee at Kaufmann's yesterday.

Meanwhile, the Communists were circulating handbills explaining they were calling May 30 "National Youth Day" instead of Decoration Day. The bills stated:

"On May 30, Decoration Day, Andy Mellon's paid politicians will try to speak to us through parades and celebrations of 'the glorious idea of giving up our lives for our (Andy Mellon) country.'

"They will also try to prevent the steel workers from striking.

"Instead of falling for the war ballyhoo, let's all have our own parades, our own celebrations, not for war, but against war—for the strike demands of the steel workers."

POSTAL AIDES ON PROBATION

Two former trusted employes of Uncle Sam's postoffice, pleading guilty to embezzlement from the mails, were placed on probation today by Federal Judge R. N. Gibson.

One of them, Lemuel A. Bosserman, 50, for 12 years postmaster at Barnesboro, Pa., admitted that he had taken $3,170.34 from the mails since last July.

More than a dozen of his fellow townsmen appeared as character witnesses for Bosserman. He was given two years probation and fined $500.

Edwin M. Stewart, 33, substitute clerk in the Tyrone postoffice, who pleaded guilty to taking approximately $50 from letters in his care, was placed on probation for one year and ordered to pay $100 fine.

YOUTH ADMITS BANK ROBBERY

A robbery suspect held by Swissvale police admitted he is guilty of a Boliver bank burglary and many other robberies, Swissvale and State Palice said today. The suspect is Clair Rambler, 22, of 7912 St, Lawrence street, Swissvale.

Police said a search of the youth's home revealed loot stolen in Swissvale, Rankin, Lewistown, Pa., and other towns. Upon the discovery of two guns, State Police were called, and in questioning the suspect yesterday, said they were told by Rambler that he got the guns in the First National Bank at Boliver.

Police said Rambler admitted he broke into the Boliver bank at night, took the firearms, a small amount of money and stamps.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 29.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is out our way here. He has got a tough job. It's by far the toughest job in the cabinet. Secretary of Navy only has to deal with an admiral, Secretary of the Army with the generals, Postmaster General with the politicians. But when you deal with the farmer you are dealing with a man who is a dealer himself, so if I was Wallace I would say:

Will Rogers

"Boys, you all are just too good farmers, you just raise too much. If you just wouldn't be so expert for a few years. It don't do any good to plow under every third row. If you are going to raise more on the other two than you did on the three. Your efficiency is driving you to the poor house, so please don't be such good farmers."

Yours, WILL.

French Fliers Used Enough Gas To Circle Globe

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Rossi and Codos landed fine and dandy on Long Island. They came down as safely as clay pigeons in a cross-eyed shooting match.

San Diego will have to wait while New York gives them the official welcome. That includes parades, torn paper and free parking by the fire plug.

It's a tough job to fly the Atlantic against the grain. Even though they lost their cash prize, it's better to land in New York than Toledo.

They used up 2,000 gallons of gasoline. That will take you twice around the world in a flivver. And have enough left over to kill the mosquitoes in the cow pond, clean your vest and start the morning fire.

G. A. R. ALLIES TO SHUN 'BOYS IN GRAY'

Won't Aid Dedication Of Memorial to Confederates

There won't be any members of the Grand Army of the Republic at the dedication of the county's first Confederate monument in West Park, Saturday.

William B. Blakeley, president of the Federated Patriotic Societies Allied with the G. A. R., today said an invitation to participate had been received from Mrs. Arch C. Perry, president of the Pittsburgh Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, but had been rejected.

At a meeting of five organizations constituting the federated orders, it was decided not to take part in any way, Blakeley said. He added:

"The question originally arose over use of the Confederate flag. I understand they wanted us to take part in a massing of flags."

H. G. William Ruhe, superintendent of Memorial Hall and former Pennsylvania department commander of the G. A. R., said the "Boys in Blue" had received no invitation and, of course, would not take part.

Two years ago, at a national encampment of the Union Veterans in Cincinnati it was decided the G. A. R. would never join in any ceremony in which the Confederate flag was used, Ruhe stated.

The monument to be unveiled is in honor of 118 junior officers of Gen. John Morgan, captured near Lisbon, O., in July, 1863, and imprisoned in Western State Penitentiary, then located in West Park.

SLUMS, CRIME MEETING TOPIC

That Pittsburgh slums are centers of crime, ill health and juvenile delinquency will be charged at a housing conference sponsored by the League for Social Justice in the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Theater at 8 p. m., June 6.

The conference, which is in charge of George E. Evans, of the city's building Inspection Bureau, will discuss the state's position in slum elimination and seek to answer the question, "How can we in Pittsburgh build low-cost comfortable homes that are within the reach of the average wage earner?"

The meeting is planned as an attempt to interest the community in Pittsburgh's housing situation. It will be attended by representatives of housing and planning commissions in Harrisburg and Washington.

E. N. Montague, of the Bureau of Business Research; Frederic Bigger, of the city Planning Department; Joseph Tufts, of the Pittsburgh Housing Association; Sidney A. Teller, of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement, and David Goldner are to be the principal speakers.

Efforts to Change Ramp Plan Renewed

Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston, James L. Stuart, Relief Work Division head in Allegheny County, and Charles M. Reppert, chief city engineer, will go to Washington Thursday in another attempt to have the government revise its postoffice ramp plan.

Treasury Department officials will be asked to substitute widening of Bigelow boulevard with an underpass to Seventh avenue for the present plan of a narrow ramp to the new postoffice from Seventh avenue.

$50 in Prizes Weekly for News Tips

Are you alert? Do you wish to make your alertness pay? The Sun-Telegraph is presenting the opportunity. Every week it is offering a total of $50 in prizes for NEWS TIPS telephoned to the News Tip Editor, Grant 6500.

If you know of any accident, of a business merger, of a big building project—that is NEWS. Watch especially for unusual stories about children and animals and for stories that lend themselves to interesting pictures.

For the best exclusive news tip of the week $15.00 will be given, for the second best, $10.00, and for the next 25 best, $1.00 each.

A Word for Memorial Day

By Edwin Markham

A wreath for the heroes who saw the sign
And took their place in the battle-line.
They were walls of granite and gates of brass,
And they cried to God, "They shall not pass!"
So they hurled them back with a storm of cheers,
And the sound of it echoes on over the years.

Earth shall be richer for the blood they shed;
Life more husht for her heroes dead;
And wherever their brave hearts ceased to beat,
We all will travel with stiller feet.
And the heaven that took them into her light
Will feel the touch of an added might.

More work is waiting them OVER THERE
In that better land, in that brighter air;
For work well done must have its pay
In a greater work on a greater way.

A song for the heroes gone on ahead
To join the hosts of the marching dead.
And a song for the daring God who gave Heroic souls who could dare the grave
Praise for the power He laid on youth
To challenge disaster and die for truth.
What greater gift can the High God give
Than the power to die that the truth may live?

TWO INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Two men were injured last night when their car was demolished after striking a concrete safety platform in front of the Duquesne incline on West Carson street.

Albert Daley, 29, of 915 First street, McKees Rocks, was taken to Presbyterian Hospital with fractured ribs and nose. George Stinson, 32, of 402 Grove street, McKees Rocks, the driver, was treated for a forehead injury. He was charged with reckless driving, police reported.

Mrs. Mary Floor, 44, of R. F. D., Duquesne road, was injured last night when an auto in which she was riding went over an embankment in Buttermilk road, Mifflin Township. She was taken to Homestead Hospital.

A collision between a Franks-town avenue street car and an auto at Oakwood and Bennett streets last night resulted in injuries. A. H. Hight, 63, driver of the auto, and his wife, Mary, 61, of 561 Braddock avenue, were taken to Pittsburgh Hospital.

PENNA. AWAITS ROOSEVELT

International News Service.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., May 29.—Long accustomed to the sound of guns and drums, the spectacle of marching troops and the oratory of national figures, this community vibrated with a new excitement today on the eve of the Memorial Day celebration.

Thousands will meet here tomorrow to hear President Roosevelt deliver his Memorial Day address from the same spot where President Lincoln dedicated the national cemetery in 1863.

Military and civic officials, units of the Regular Army and other military branches, drill teams of veterans' organizations, and scattered survivors of both the Blue and Gray will pour in over all roads.

Among those participating in the exercises will be 10 United States Senators and 32 members of the House of Representatives.

The President and his party will arrive by special train at 4 o'clock. He will be introduced by Gov. Gifford Pinchot.

COUNTY TO PAY AFTER ALL

Justice of the Peace E. C. Shoop, of Springdale, won't have to pay the costs of trying John Swick, of New Kensington, after all.

Visiting Judge W. A. McConnel, of Beaver County, relieved the squire of the burden and placed the costs on the county today after Shoop explained that Swick's wife had apparently exercised her woman's prerogative of changing her mind.

The squire was ordered to pay the costs of trying Swick on an assault and battery charge yesterday by a Criminal Court jury, which called the squire the "real prosecutor."

Shoop told the Judge that Swick's wife, Michilina, had been "vindictive and arrogant" until she reached the witness stand yesterday, but after that her attitude was entirely different.

Swick was acquitted of the charge, resulting from alleged abuse of Mrs. Swick.

Sino-Japanese Debate and Dance

A Sino-Japanese debate and dance is to be held in Pythian Temple, 2011 Penn avenue, on Wednesday night, at which Dr. Liang and Dr. Ashima Takis will debate the Japanese invasion of Manchuria. Henry Smith, Negro, is chairman.

Postoffice Here To Close for Holiday

Postmaster William Turner announced today that all departments and sections of the main office, stations and branches of the United States Postoffice will be closed to the public Memorial Day. The film station will be closed from 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon until 9:30 o'clock at night.

No carrier deliveries will be made. Special delivery matter and perishable articles will be delivered according to the regular Sunday schedule and collections will be made according to the regular holiday schedule.

CITY WILL BOW IN HOMAGE TO HEROES

Veterans to Take Part In Ceremonies at Cemeteries

Reverent homage will mingle with light hearted revelry tomorrow as Decoration Day is observed throughout the Pittsburgh district.

Veterans of the more recent wars will march through the streets to the stirring music of bugle and drum while automobiles will convey the few, feeble survivors of the Civil War to the various cemeteries in which services will be held.

The principal patriotic services in the city proper will be in Allegheny, South Side, Uniondale, Woodlawn and Homewood cemeteries. Veterans of Foreign Wars, of the World War and Spanish-American War veterans will have charge of the programs, having taken over the observance several years ago from the Grand Army of the Republic.

WOMEN TO TAKE PART

Women, too, will have a place in remembering the soldier dead. In addition to activities at the various cemeteries, the Woman's Relief Corps No. 60, auxiliary to the McPherson Post, G. A. R., will conduct twilight services tomorrow evening at the Point Park for sailors and marines.

South and North County parks will be the scene of varied celebrations.

As customary, the downtown and branch postoffices will be closed tomorrow. No carrier deliveries will be made. The film station will be closed from 1:30 to 9:30 p. m. only. Special delivery and perishable parcels will be delivered according to Sunday schedule.

STUDENTS HOLD EXERCISES

Sixteen hundred students of Allegheny High School today held Memorial exercises in North Side Carnegie Hall. The students marched from the school to the hall at 9 o'clock this morning.

Services will be held tomorrow night in the Emsworth Borough Hall. All neighborhood civic groups have been invited to attend the ceremony.

MODEL BUILDERS' COURSE FOR BEGINNERS
LESSON V—A GLIDER

Any boy or girl, with proper guidance, can learn to build model planes. The trouble with most enthusiasts who start in, however, is that they try to bite off too big a piece and attempt to construct a flying stick model covered with tissue and embodying al the prinlcipes of junior aeronautics rignt off the bat.

The result is that their first craft is a shaky affair and won't fly. The boy or girl believing that he just isn't suited for such work becomes discouraged and doesn't carry on.

In learning to build models, as anything else, one must start with the A. B. C.'s and begin with a simple model. For that reason I have chosen the "baby all-balsa glider" as out first model, for it eliminate many of the hazards which discourage so many beginners. The baby all-balsa glider has no tissue covered wings.

It is built of all wood and hence the name all-balsa glider. Nor does it use wire clips to hold the wings on, but has them fixed right to the fuselage, as you will see in the illustration accompanying our first construction lesson for the glider which will appear in a few days.

Few materials are necessary in the construction of this glider. As a matter of fact nothing is required but a few sizes of balsa. Of course a small bottle or tube of cement, a razor blade, sandpaper and a few pins are also needed.

The pins are not used to keep the members together for member we use cement to accomplish this. However, a glider must have a little weight in the nose for balance and so we will use the pins in a manner which will be described and illustrated for you in another lesson or so.

Get Your Materials Now

Go to your nearest department store or model plane shop selling balsa wood and purchase, at once, the following balso to construct your beginners' glider:

One piece of "sheet" balso for the wings one-sixteenth (1-16) of an inch in thickness, one and one-half (1½) inches in width and twelve (12) inches long. One piece of "sheet" balso for the tail unit one-thirty-second (1-32) of an inch thick, one and one-quarter (1¼) inch wide and six and one-half (6½) inches in length, one piece of balso "stick" for the fuselage measuring eight (8) inches in length and one-quarter (¼) by one-half (½).

If you are not familiar with balso wood sizes, and if you are a beginner you most likely are not, you had better bring this column with you to your local store when purchasing balsa so as to be sure to get exactly what you want.

Air Dictionary Number 14

Because of our brief model builders' lesson today I find that I have room for another installment of our air dictionary.

BIPLANE—An airplane with two main sets of supporting wings one above the other.

BLADE BACK—The side of a propeller blade that corresponds to the upper surface of a wing.

BLADE FACE—The side of a propeller blade that corresponds to the lower surface of a wing. Also called "thrust face" and "driving face."

BLADE-WIDTH RATIO—The ratio of the chord of a propeller blade section to the diameter of the propeller.

BLIMP—A coloquial term for a non-rigid airship.

BLIND FLYING—The are of controlling an aircraft in flight solely by the use of the instruments on the instrument board. Also called "instrument flying."

BLINKER LIGHT—A flashing beacon light giving more than 20 flashes per minute.

BLISTER—A sheet of clear water raised by the motion of a float or bull and separated from the water surface by an air space.

BOAT (FLYING)—A form of seaplane whose main body or hull permits the craft to float on water.

BODY (OF PLANES)—The cabin or fuselage of an airplane.

Another list of air terms will appear soon. In addition to giving you this most complete series of air terms, words and phrases ever published anywhere, arrangements are being made to illustrate for you, in our column, many of the more important definitions when the air dictionary is completed, thus giving you additional important material along this line, for your scrap book.

HAPPY LANDINGS!

New B'nai B'rith Officers Installed

With the installation of Attorney Frank R. S. Caplan, of Pittsburgh and McKeesport, as president, the annual convention of District Lodge No. 3, B'nai B'rith, ended yesterday in McKeesport. The 1935 convention will be held in Hazleton.

Other new officers are Calvin Leichtman, Hazleton; Attorney M. Leon Tolochko, Pittsburgh; Dr. Louis Gershenfeld, Philadelphia, vice presidents; Joseph Herbach, Philadelphia, secretary, and Dr. B. L. Pollack, Jersey City, treasurer.

U. S. Speaker Rainey as he received from Miss Smith on behalf of the Pittsburgh Wing of the Junior Birdmen of America a model of the plane that the late Col. CURFEW NEARS FOR MT. RUSHMORE TEXTS

Tomorrow—at midnight—the Mount Rushmore National Memorial inscription competition closes.

Every text must be received either by the Pittsburgh Rushmore Committee, care the Sun-Telegraph, or if the entrant is a member of an organization actively participating through its own special committee, by that group's chairman. No text received with a postmark later than midnight tomorrow will be considered.

Haste is the guiding word for every man, woman and youth in Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and Northern West Virginia. No delay should be permitted that will postpone the placing of every participant's text in the mail tonight. That will be the safest procedure to assure receipt of the text before the closing date.

News from throughout the country from regional headquarters established by the Hearst newspapers indicate no patriotic endeavor has ever gripped the nation with more enthusiastic support than this competition. The Sun-Telegraph and associated Hearst newspapers are conducting the project for the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission.

At the Pittsburgh committee headquarters, each mail brings heavier returns than the previous one. All the district—through organizations, schools and by individuals—the response has exceeded expectation.

The only regrettable incident in the competition is the failure of many participants to obey the rules and suggestions continuously repeated daily in the Sun-Telegraph. The greatest error is the failure to keep the text within 600 words. Every contestant has been repeatedly warned that each word, date, subtitle or even a numeral separating the episodes will be counted. The participant's name, address and classification are the only words not counted.

Many erring participants who had already submitted their text are taking advantage of the few remaining hours to submit a corrected entry. If you have made this mistake, rewrite your text eliminating the excess words and rush it to headquarters. There is no limit to the number of entries each contestant submits. But there is the limit of 600 words allowed on a text.

Remember, too, that each of the nine specific episodes of history set forth in the rules must be the basis of the text. How you write it, what style you follow is a matter for your own choice. But use plain and simple words rather than flowery and fanciful phrases.

Remember—midnight, Memorial Day—tomorrow—closes the competition.

BLARNEY STONES

Fluffy Little Salted Peanut Covered Cakes

Four eggs.
One cup sugar.
One cup cake flour.
One and one-half teaspoons baking powder.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One-half cup boiling water.
One-half teaspoon vanilla.

Separate the egg whites from the yolks, reserving egg yolk for icing. Beat the three egg yolks with a rotary egg beater until they are thick and lemon-colored. Add the sugar gradually, beating continually with rotary beater until the mixture is smooth and creamy. Sift the dry ingredients and add to the egg mixture alternately with boiling water. Blend in the vanilla and beat to mix well. Fold in egg whites beaten stiff but not dry. Pour into well-greased and floured 12x8 cake pan, two inches deep. Bake 30 minutes 350 degrees F. When cake is cool, cut in two-inch squares, spread top and sides of squares with a thin layer of butter cream icing and dip the iced surfaces of the cake into roasted, salted, ground peanuts.

BUTTER CREAM ICING

One-half cup butter.
One egg yolk.
Two and one-half cups confectioners' sugar.
One teaspoon vanilla.
One-half pound peanuts.

Cream the butter and egg together. Gradually blend in sugar and cream thoroughly until soft and smooth. Blend in vanilla. If icing seems too stiff to spread easily, add a tablespoon or two of cream. Spread in thin layer over top and sides of cakes. Dip in nuts. Chop peanuts or put them through medium knife in food chopper. Do not chop too fine.

Five $1 Prize Winners

MRS. T. A. CRAIG

NEW JERSEY FILLED SPONGE CAKE

THE CAKE

One cup plus three tablespoons cake or pastry flour.
One teaspoon baking powder.
One cup sugar.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
Three eggs.
One-half cup hot water.
Two teaspoons lemon extract.

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Beat egg yolks until creamy, add half the sugar slowly and continue beating. Add hot water and remaining sugar and beat for five minutes. Fold in carefully the sifted flour mixture and flavoring. Beat egg whites until stiff, fold into mixture and put into a tube pan measuring about nine inches in diameter or eight inches square at the top. Bake 45 to 55 minutes in a slow oven (325 deg. F.). Invert for one hour, then remove from pan. Before serving cut out inside of cake making a larger opening. Cover with whipped cream, sweetened and flavored and fill center with strawberry macaroon mousse. Decorate with strawberries.

STRAWBERRY MACAROON MOUSSE

One pint strawberries.
One-third cup sugar.
Three tablespoons corn syrup.
Few grains salt.
One-half tablespoon gelatine.
Three tablespoons cold water.
One-half pint cream.
One-half cup macaroons.

Wash and hull strawberries, sprinkle with sugar, let stand one hour, mash and rub through a sieve. Add corn syrup, salt and gelatine soaked in cold water and dissolved over hot water. Chill and fold into cream beaten stiff, fold in macaroons rolled fine and freeze in refrigerator.

MRS. THOMAS LIPPERT,
701 Loretta avenue, Toronto, O.

SPICED PEARS IN STRAWBERRY JELLY.

One package strawberry gelatin.
One and one-fourth cups boiling water.
Two-inch stick cinnamon.
Six cloves.
One cup cold water.
Four pears, peeled and halved.
One-eighth honeydew melon.
One cup seedless white grapes.

Cook cinnamon and cloves in boiling water five minutes. Remove spices; measure one cup of syrup and if cup is not full fill with more boiling water and pour over the gelatin. Stir until dissolved. Add cold water, chill until it begins to thicken. Place six halves of pears on end around sides of deep ring mold. Pour on thickened jello. Slice remaining pears and mix into jello on top of mold. Chill until firm. Unmold, fill center with white grapes and honeydew melon cut into small pieces. Serves six.

MISS NELL REED

MEXICAN TOMATOES

In a baking dish of desired size, put first a layer of skinned and sliced tomatoes then a layer of sliced peppers (seeds removed), then a layer of sliced onions. Sprinkle with raw rice and season with salt, pepper, sugar and dots of butter or bacon fat. Repeat until dish is full, with tomatoes for top layer. Sprinkle with bread crumbs and bake one hour in hot oven. Canned tomatoes may be used. About three tablespoons rice are required for a medium-sized dish. With baked potatoes and biscuits, this is a full meal.

MISS SUE B. CALLENDER,
Chamber of Commerce Building.

PEPPERMINT CANDY CAKE

One-third cup butter.
One cup white sugar.
Two eggs.
Two-thirds cup sour milk or buttermilk.
One-fourth teaspoon soda.
One teaspoon vanilla.
One and three-fourth cups cake flour.
Two teaspoons baking powder.
One-eighth teaspoon salt.
One-third cup finely crushed red or red and white stick candy.

Cream butter and sugar, separate and add egg yolks and vanilla. Beat well. Add sour milk with soda dissolved in it, alternately with the flour which has been sifted with the baking powder and salt. Fold in stiff egg whites. Place in two seven-inch layer pans, greased and floured, spread to edges. Sprinkle with crushed candy and bake in moderate oven 20 to 25 minutes. Put the top layers together with the candy part together and ice with marshmallow cream frosting and sprinkle with crushed candy.

MARSHMALLOW CREAM ICING

One cup granulated sugar.
One-half cup water.
One-half teaspoon cream tartar.
Two egg whites.
Fourteen marshmallows.

Boil sugar, water, cream tartar slowly. Boil until it begins to spin a thread. Have marshmallows cut in small pieces in stiffy beaten egg whites. Pour about one-fourth of syrup over whites and marshmallows—beat. Add all but a small part of remaining syrup—beat well. Add rest of syrup. Adding the syrup gradually assures one of creamy icing very much like divinity. The marshmallows keep the frosting moist and creamy for a longer period than ordinary boiled frosting.

EDNA MILLER,
1737 Kenneth avenue, Arnold.

BANANA AND RHUBARB BETTY

Three-quarters pound rhubarb.
One and one-half cups buttered bread crumbs.
Three-quarters cup brown sugar.
One large banana.
Nutmeg to taste.

Wash and dice rhubarb, mix with sugar, allow to stand for half an hour. Arrange alternately layers of crumbs, sliced banana and sugared rhubarb in buttered baking dish. Top with crumbs, sprinkle with nutmeg, and bake in moderate oven 30 to 40 minutes.

Things I Never Knew 'Til Now
(Can you imagine? He gets paid, yet!)

The "white wings" in Shanghai wear red drawers—on the outside!

One has to ride backwards third class in Japan.

According to a chum just returned—all the published accounts of Japanese hostility to Americans are hooey. On the surface, at least, they are the friendliest of people in the Orient.

European residents in Yokohama have all rented large space in the new bank vault—sincerely believing that the Russians will soon bomb Yokohama and Tokio—35 miles away by street car.

The Japanese can't fly. The same chum says he saw innumerable squadrons trying a tight formation which would rate one star.

If you hear a Japanese say: "Come, Bowo," do not look for a dog. He is merely saying "good night" to friend.

The telephone girls "hello" you—by saying "Ohio."

Prof. Coue's renowned "Every day, in every way, I'm getting better and better" apparently comes from the Chinese stevedores, who for thousands of years have been saying to themselves: "Heh, ho, heh, ho. The sing-song means: "My burden is not heavy, my burden, etc."

You get from six to eight warnings from the International Police in Shanghai for motor violations before you get a ticket.

When one gets off the boat at Macao (Portuguese settlement), on an island three hours from Hong Kong, the first place the taxi driver takes you to see is the opium factory. You may smokee, if you likee.

On the Continent (Europe, not Asia), when a couple walk down the street, it is poor form for the femme to walk on the inside, as we do here. The custom is for the woman to walk nearest the gutter.

All over the Continent they insist on songs sung in English, even though they don't understand it. As soon as a European singer warbles in the native tongue—they become disinterested.

In Paris, if you order champagne in your hotel you pay $8 for the same bottle that costs $2 if you go out and buy it yourself.

Mae West is the biggest film draw in Euroupe. Her phrase C. U. A. S. M. S. T. is on the tip of every tongue, old and young.

The cabs in London are built so small by law to enable them to get through London's narrow streets. Detroit has them, too.

Although they grow more tulips in Holland than in any other country, they are forbidden to sell them.

The average Continental is more familiar with the dance bands in the U. S. than the average U. S. citizen.

The only reason they still wear the picturesque old Dutch costumes in Volendam, Holland, is because of the tourist trade.

In the restaurants of Paris, a woman signifies her liking for a strange man by permitting him to pay her check.

The union scale for stage hands in England is 25 shillings per week—which is just about $6.50. (Harya, Tim Hunt and Jack Hurford!)

In London it is the custom to go to bed with a hot water bottle.

Anybody who drinks port wine in London is considered a sissy! (It's my favorite after-midnight beverage ! ! !)

A Hollywood Edison has perfected a wire gadget that holds your collar open so you can wash your neck, or shave, without getting it (the collar) wet! Probably inspired by Stepin (Lazy Bones) Fetchit.

You get a new brain every 60 days. You need it, too.

Lord Byron, the poet, was such an egotist he never read Shakespeare or Milton, lest he later be accused of pirating them.

The somnambulism of a Waukegan, Illinois, chap named Hughes has never been equaled. He went to bed one night—and awoke the following morning in his father's barn! He traveled over a rough country road, and even paid his fare and rode a trolley—while fast asleep!

Things I'd like to know, if true. Why Philadelphia will eat nothing but brown eggs while New York will only eat white ones? And why pen makers conduct their correspondence with typewriters?

It is problematical whether one out of fifty people in England would be able to tell who Joseph Rank is.

Yet he is the richest man in England today!

Stephen C. Foster in his last days, and penniless, once asked his publishers for some copies of his old songs, and was refused. Where were the publishers located? (Why, on Broadway, of course!)

You can pick delicious mushrooms in the Park. But look out for that cop who gives tickets to children, instead of a first warning.

In the New York Public Library you may find an old novel entitled: "Things by Their Right Names." The author is—Anonymous!

Echoes From Cabarets

By THE ROUNDER

After an evening at Eddie Peyton's, Billy Arnold, famous racing driver, gave "Flea" Madden, Peyton drummer and self-confessed worst driver, $3 to drive him to town. Madden's wild, zigzag drive so pleased the racer that he offered the drummer a $25 weekly salary to act as his chauffeur. Madden refused because of "insufficient insurance."

The next big show at Peyton's Steubenville Pike spot, following Ozzie Nelson and Harriet Hilliard, Tuesday, June 5, will be Connie's "Hot Chocolates," Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, June 13, 14 and 15.

"Red" Sheffins, Peyton waiter, has been a daddy since Thursday morning. Eight pounds and a boy.

Aleene Dennison is back as Show Boat mistress of ceremonies, after a brief absence. Jack Morgan, of the Morgan and Shaw team at the Boat, has just returned from a Pennsylvania and Ohio vaudeville tour. The Williams and Naumann dance team care for each other, 'tis said.

That George Mundy band at Villa Royale, which we rate one of the pleasantest dance music producers in the district, has played over four of the five local radio stations. Incidentally, girls, they're all eligible.

Pittsburgh lost one of its most popular night club figures Sunday night when Etzi Covato left with his boys for a summer's engagement at Babette's Golden Inn, Atlantic City, after which he will return to Pittsburgh. Etzi claims that when he and his orchestra played on the first commercial broadcast featuring an orchestra. He was largely responsible for the rapid rise of the Plaza during his connection with the club for the past two years. His many friends wish him luck, and await his return in the fall.

A new star will blaze in the night club firmament after Saturday night, when Fred Sanders will open his new Casino at Cliff Mine, Sewickley-Imperial road. It lies far enough from the Steubenville Pike to be free of disturbing noises. In case of inclement weather, dancing may be enjoyed indoors, instead of on the new patio. Fred has engaged the Trombetta Orchestra and a floor show including Billy and Betty, dance team.

The Hi Hat Club, Aspinwall, will open its new 1,000-person capacity patio tonight. An 11-piece dance orchestra and two nightly 50-minute floor shows will feature the club's annex.

Bill McDanold's Walrose Night Club, Ambridge, has engaged a new seven-act floor "feature week" show, including Jerry Manning, Mary Jane and Miss Barrett. Walrose pool will open tomorrow.

Magic Convention Show Tonight

Pittsburgh magicians tonight will entertain out of town delegates to the convention of the Society of American Magicians. Daniel O'Day, Fred Robison, William Neff, Joseph Fleckenstein, William H. McCaffrey (the society's national president), Jean Foley and Irving J. Newman will perform in the Hotel Schenley ballroom.

Another show, Wednesday night, will be given in the same hall by Werner C. Dornfield, Jack Gwynne, Tom Osborne, Al Baker, Russ Walsh, Max Holden, Julien J. Proskauer, John Mulholland and Dr. Harlan Tarbell, all from out of town.

One of the latter performers will offer the original milk can escape used by the late Harry Houdini. There also will be an illusion in which a woman is "burned alive."

There is a small admission charge for the general public.

Real Alaska Of Gold to Be Film

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, May 29.—Hello! It was chater time (which is It was chatter time (which is the Brown Derby. There was "Klondike Kate" Rockwell Matson, the Lady of Alaska, when it was the "World's Tought Spot" during the gay young days of Tex Rickard, Wilson Mizner and Alex Pantages. Kate was telling of the time when Marjorie Rambeau, then about 9 years old, dressed her in overalls, played banjo and pased a hat for small change.

Quite oblivious of the two staring matrons in an adjoining booth, Kate calmly dragged out a bag of tobacco and pack of brown cigaret. papers. With one hand she rolled the neates' cigaret I've seen in years—but she doesn't strike matches with her fingernails!

"Klondike Kate's story—real episodes from her life—will reach the screen, and Marjorie Rambeau will portray Kate. Harry Weber is planning an Independent production for a major release.

Kate's gone back to Dawson—to a big Swede who has been waiting for her since 1900. That is a long engagement.

Jottings along newsy lanes—Walter Wanger took out corporation papers in Delaware. The new Independent producing toutfi bears his monicker. And he's decided to do some star-grabbing. Secret tipoff is that one of the biggest box office attractions is all set to join him . . . The Warner plant took a quick glimpse at Warren William as Philo Vance in "The Dragon Murder Case" and decided that he should continue his detective roles. Warren will super-sleuth in the Earl Stanley chillers. "The Case of the Howling Dog" and "The Case of the Curious Bride."

Wanderings around Holywood—Gossips have it that Eddie Buzzell will soon lead Syble Clark to the altar! . . . Betcha didn't know that Baby Peggy, now all grown up, was one of the chorus gals in the now-folded "Shim Sham Revue" . . . Alan Dinehart will go in for speechmaking when he chirps on "All the World's a Stage" before the U. S. C. student body June 4 . . . Rena Borzage's gone "Badminton Daffy" and is taking lessons from the champ, Jess Willard . . . Pauline Garon gets a nice break in "The Merry Widow."

* * *

Gadding about the Movie Boulevards . . . Harry Green, the Jewish comedian, turns SERIOUS for a role in "Wanted" at Fox . . . Virginia Hammond came to Hollywood three years ago for a visit of six weeks—and she's been capturing good roles ever since . . . Nick Foran has turner CROONER and warbles a ditty, "So What?" with Irene Franklin in "Change of Heart," the new Janet Gaynor-Charley Farrell lovey-dovey . . . In "Jane Eyre" you'll see some old timers—Doris Lloyd, Aileen Pringle, David Torrence, Lionel Belmore and Clarice Selwyn.

GREEN ROOM GLEANINGS

Any of the Broadway columnists would have given his eye teeth for the story . . . And only the fact that I was on the "inside," so to speak, enables me to repeat it here . . . It happened in Mary Pickford's dressing room in the Brooklyn Paramount Theater the day word reached New York that Lord Ashley had sued for divorce naming Douglas Fairbanks . . . Newspapermen and women were at the stage door clamoring for a statement from "America's Sweetheart" . . . The "news" had not yet been broken to her . . . Waiting in her dressing room for her act to end was her personal representative . . . It was his job to inform her of the legal action in England . . . "Miss Pickford," he said, "Lord Ashley has just filed suit for divorce naming Douglas. The reporters want a statement from you." . . . Miss Pickford didn't speak for several minutes. . . . Then, her eyes filled with tears, she answered: "Those people are going to ruin my husband's career." . . . Which explains, I think, where Mary Pickford's heart lies . . . The incident was recalled because of the dispatch from Los Angeles saying Miss Pickford would do nothing to embarrass Fairbanks until his legal difficulties in London were settled.

The finest performance I have ever seen on stage or screen, bar none, is that of Henry Hull as Jeeter Lester, the Georgia hillbilly in "Tobacco Road" . . . It is my advice, if and when you see the play, to give you undivided attention to Mr. Hull . . . "Tobacco Road" as a dramatic vehicle has only one excuse for existence and that is the acting of Henry Hull . . . George Bancroft, whose first comeback effort in "Blood Money" was a complete fizzle, gets another chance in "Ladies First." . . . Ed Siegal, late of the Etna Harris, is now managing the Cameraphone . . . Joe Cappo and Francis King, after 22 weeks at the Plaza, are now at the Dover Club in Philadelphia . . . Guy Lombardo's publicity purveyor will tell you, for no reason at all, that the band leader directs his orchestra in his first picture, "Many Happy Returns," with a baton made from the leg of a chair once owned by Jesse James. . . . Why not be up-to-date and make it a chair owned by Dillinger? . . . Nigel Bruce, the peanut-eating sleuth in "Murder in Trinidad," which should have run longer at the Fulton, should have a brilliant future in pictures . . . His work in the mystery play stands among the best in recent months.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

In Which the Customers Do the Work.

"DEAR MARK:" writes Frances Beck, of Boston. "The incident actually occurred. So if you'd care for a story that borders on truth for a change, you might want to use it.

"Ordinarily, when Ruth was through at the night spot in which she worked, she took a taxi home. Upon this certain night, however, she had used the subway. Now she was sorry. For the hour was late and the night was dark. And after she left the subway, her route took her past a neighborhood that was none too good.

"In her purse that she clutched tightly, Ruth carried her week's wages. More, she was wearing a diamond ring that had belonged to her mother and was fairly valuable. She was growing more and more nervous—so she took the ring from her finger and slipped it into the pocket of her coat.

"Almost immediately thereafter, she came very close to fainting with fear. For two figures stepped out of a doorway directly into her path. One of them snatched at her handbag and the other flourished a gun.

"The stickup men were thin, pimply-faced youths who were probably just as frightened as Ruth, herself. But the girl, of course, didn't know that. She tried to scream and couldn't. She handed over her purse without a murmur.

"In back of her, Ruth heard a rush of footsteps. Then a tall, stalwart figure threw himself on the two youths. He aimed a well-placed boot at one's shins and sent the other sprawling with a swift uppercut. A moment later the holdup men were beating a hasty retreat—and Ruth was once more clutching her purse.

"She gave out a 'How can I ever thank you?' or words to that effect, and gazed into the handsome stranger's eyes. He waved away her exclamations of gratitude and smiled charmingly.

"'It's a bit late for a girl like you to be out alone,' he told her. 'Just to avoid trouble, I'd like to accompany you to your door.'

"Did Ruth consent? Don't be silly. This was romance as she had always dreamed of it; a handsome and heroic gentleman who had saved her from grave danger.

"At her doorstep, the handsome man held Ruth's hand for a long time. He inquired if he might call on her some evening in the near future, and the girl responded eagerly that he could.

"Then Ruth went into her house, quite certain that she was one of the happiest girls alive. She opened her purse and thrust in her hand to take out her pay envelope. Her eyes grew wide and her mouth dropped. She groped feverishly in her coat pocket. Nothing doing.

"The gallant and heroic rescuer had not only relieved her of her money, but of the diamond ring as well!" . . .

"AT Bill's gay nineties the other night," scribbles Jim's Jean, "they were talking about a certain musician who has the rep of being an expert in his line.. Nobody knows how he earned the reputation because he has never done anything to warrant it.

"'He must be wonderful to know," sighed one girl. "'They say he's so odd.' . . . . . '. . . . . 'More than odd,' piped up Gloria Grafton. 'He's unique. He's the only genius in the world who retired before he had a career!'" . . .

"THERE'S just a chance," chances Joey Nash, "that you haven't heard the story of the tailor who visited a nudist colony and stopped to talk to a young woman.

"'My dear girl,' said the tailor, 'I can't help telling you that that's a rather tight blue suit you are wearing.'

"'Blue suit, nothing,' returned the girl peevishly. 'I'm just cold!" . . .

Fun Picture In Fulton

By KARL KRUG

As diverting a little comedy as you would care to cast an eye at or cock an ear to has arrived in the Fulton. It goes by the name of "Half a Sinner," but, in reality, it is nothing more nor less than that grand old stage success, "Alias the Deacon," transferred to the talking screen.

It is a Universal production, and that company has preserved much of the homely, small town color that made "Alias the Deacon" such a big legitimate hit. In the title role is Berton Churchill, who created the part on the stage, and who plays it to the hilt in its latest medium.

"Half a Sinner" is one of those unpretentious photoplays that come along every once in a while without benefit of drum-beating to send an audience away satisfied. This agreeable little tidbit never takes itself too seriously; its characters are such as you'll find on any main street in America, and both the action and dialogue have been handled in admirable style.

As the sanctimonious old card sharp, masquerading as a deacon, Mr. Churchill plays with ease and skill. He fosters a romance between Joel McCrea and Miss Sally Blaine, and through his dexterity with the pasteboards saves the Widow Clarke's hotel from the village Shylock, who holds the notes. Mr. Churchill is the boss of his characterization at every twist and turn, and if the Hollywood moguls don't give him bigger and better roles from now on, then there's another screw loose somewhere.

After "Half a Sinner" gets away from its boxcar opening, it settles down to tell the tale it has to tell with unassuming naturalness. There are, to be sure, spots where it suffers without the presence of Mr. Churchill, but there are excellent supplementary characterizations by Alexandria Carlisle, Russell Hopton and Guinn Williams.

A three-day run is too short for "Half a Sinner," but the current Fulton booking schedule calls for "Laughing Boy," with Ramon Novarro and Lupe Valez to arrive in the Sixth street theater Thursday morning.

Decoration Day Bill At Kennywood

Decoration Day will be festive at Kennywood tomorrow, with all-day operation of the big roller coasters, fun-makers and other amusements. The swimming pool will be in operation for the first time this season. Cervone's American Legionaires will be in the bandstand. Billy Lorette and Castello's circus will be other free attractions. There will be dancing afternoon and night with music by Jess Hawkins' Virginians.

Short Plays Well Done

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

An extremely well selected program of one-act plays completed the season of the Masquers in Calvary Parish House last night. "All good," verdict of the audience at the conclusion, is honestly echoed here.

In "The Farewell Supper," by Arthur Schnitzler, Reginald Stanborough, Miss Keith Sterling and E. P. Rafferty, demonstrated how easy it is to be rid of one damsel when another intrigues, especially if the one to be discarded has the same idea—first. Humorous refinement of blase sophistication, well played.

How to sell a tractor by the longest method when the buyer prefers the briefest was comically shown by Howard Blaine, Joseph Barber and Pauline Mills in "The Master Salesman," all fun.

As the finale "Casualties," Martin Flavin's tragic bit of war aftermath, proved conclusively how the Masquers won the Drama League trophy with it. Every word, every detail, emotion, tempo and atmosphere perfect as a gassed soldier reacts to his wife's affair with the doctor. Eda Szeckay (especially), John Johns and William H. Hetzel made it so.

Idlewild to Open Tomorrow

ROSS, DOUBLE CHAMP, HAILED AS FISTIC WONDER

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Ross at Fistic Heights. Looks Like Ring's Best. Pirate Pitching Consoles. Overall Lands Old Bucs. Famous Arena Goes Out. Osborn Still Can Jump.

It isn't only of the two classes over which he now rules that Barney Ross is the reigning sensation today. His brilliant achievement in defeating Jimmy McLarnin last night, to add the world welterweight crown to the lightweight title he already held, makes Chicago's double champion the outstanding figure of the entire fight game. There comes to mind no other battler in the whole field who could go out of his own division and beat a champion of McLarnin's caliber in another class.

Barney Ross

It wouldn't be fair to Ross to speculate as to whether the outcome might have been different if McLarnin had not been out of action for a year and had been allowed to weigh up to the full welter limit. Jimmy showed that the 145-pound agreement put him under no strain by going three pounds below it, and in spite of his long absence from the ring he apparently was as good as ever. Ross must be credited with having beaten McLarnin at the latter's best, and his glory is all the greater because he upset all calculations by doing it at Jimmy's own socking style instead of depending solely on his boxing skill. Ross is more than the champion of two classes. Pound for pound, he looks like the greatest fighter of the present day in any division.

SLAB BRACE CONSOLES FOR TOUGH LOSSES

The baseball fates have not handed to any other club in the majors this season such a bitter dose of ill luck as the Pirates had to swallow yesterday in losing two great games to the Giants in spite of remarkabe pitching by Larry French and Raph Birkofer that ordinarily would have brought a couple of victories. There could be no tougher break than a double defeat when the losing hurlers allow only one run in two regulation games. French lost after pitching a nine-inning shutout and coming within two putouts of a no-hit game in the greatest exhibition of his life. Birkofer yielded only one tally and met the same fate, each defeat resulting from a home run by Travis Jackson, whose bat has won every one of the three games taken by New York from Pittsburgh this year.

But you can't take anything away from the pitching on the other side. Hal Schumacher also pitched a nine-inning shutout in the first engagement, and Carl Hubbell turned in nine more runless rounds in the second. Defeat for them would have been just as tough. But the Giants got the break of cashing in on their fine pitching while that of the Pirates was wasted. The Bucs were just unfortunate in running into Schumacher and Hubbell when those two stars were primed for their best games of the year. The high quality of the Pittsburgh pitching is the one consolation for local fans. That makes four straight games in which Gibson's flingers have gone the route, their best record of the season. Yesterday's defeats were heart-breakers, but if that sort of pitching is kept up it soon will recover the lost ground, with interest.

TWO PIRATES OVERALL'S TOUGHEST FOES

Orval Overall, who was one of the star pitchers of Frank Chance's Cubs in the long ago when that famous team won four pennants and two world championships in five seasons, is a bank president and a general bigwig in Fresno, Cal., at present at the age of 53, but he still finds time to talk baseball. Picking out the three hitters who gave him the most trouble in his heyday, Overall put two Pirates at the top of the list. One was Honus Wagner and the other was Fred Clarke. The third was Mike Donlin, of the Giants. Orval says he never was able to fool any of them to any extent.

Fred Clarke

Ty Cobb is the only player ever mentioned as rivaling Wagner for the ranking of the greatest players of all time, but Overall, who saw plenty of Cobb in two World Series, finds no room for comparison. He pronounces Wagner as having been in a class of his own, calling him a wonderful fielder and thrower, a brilliant base runner with marvelous control of his big body, and an unrivaled batsman who hit the ball with terrific power.

FAMOUS OLD ARENA GONE IN CHICAGO FIRE

An arena that had been the scene of many notable sports events passed out when the recent big Chicago fire destroyed the Dexter Park pavilion, in the rear of the stockyards. Some of the leading lights of the boxing world appeared there, including Tommy Loughran, Benny Leonard, Johnny Coulon, Mickey Walker, Shuffle Callahan, Richie and Pinky Mitchell, Jackie Fields and many others.

It was in the stockyards pavilion that Reggie McNamara, back in 1915, rode his first Chicago bike race, paired with Piggy Moran, to finish second behind Veri and the famous Oscar Egg. Al Grenda also rode there. In 1929 the arena housed Chicago's last tournament of the American Bowling Congress, and among the other events staged there were polo games, track meets and lacrosse.

OLD OLYMPIC STAR MAKES HIT AT STATE

At Penn State College they're still talking about the interesting side feature which Harold Osborn, old Olympic star, contributed to the recent annual interscholastic track championships there. Charles D. (Chick) Werner, track coach of the Lions, made a ten-strike when he persuaded Osborn, a former teammate at Illinois, to act as referee and starter. Like Milton Angier, of Johnstown, long the javelin champion, Osborn did excellent work as an official, but it was in an exhibition of high jumping that Harold caught the crowd. It was a reminder of the day when he set a world record of 6 feet 8¼ inches in competing for a place on the 1924 Olympic team.

Harold Osborn

During a lull in his starting duties, Osborn put on a one-man show at high jumping, both running and standing. First he cleared the bar at 6 feet 4 inches in the running event, and then he decided to give his 35-year-old legs a rest by doing a little standing jumping. All he did in this stunt was to clear the bar at a height which may be accepted as an exhibition world record. The bar was set at 5 feet 8 inches and Osborn cleared it in his third attempt. The tape was then applied to the center of the bar and registered 5 feet 6 inches, a fraction of an inch higher than the best recorded.

M'LARNIN (LEFT) AND ROSS AFTER THE DECISION CROWNING NEW WELTERWEIGHT KING M'LARNIN DOWN IN THE NINTH . . . . . ROSS ALSO WENT DOWN IN THIS HECTIC SESSION

DOUBLE DEFEAT COSTS BUCCOS FIRST PLACE

CHICAGO, May 29.—The open date on the Pirate schedule today offered little solace to the Pirates. George Gibson brought his tired Pittsburgh stars here from New York, where yesterday the Buccos lost their two toughest games of the season to Bill Terry's Giants. The double setback cost the Bucs first place, the Cards, who blanked the Phils, moving into the top position.

But, regardless of their bad luck of yesterday, it was up to the Pirates to shake off their regrets in time to meet a big test slated here in the next two days. The Bucs must meet the Cubs in a Memorial Day dual bill tomorrow at Wrigley Field. The two clubs will wind up the series on Thursday with a single game.

TOUGH ON FRENCH

Heroes in defeat are nice things to contemplate, but when you drop out of first place under conditions like that which prevailed at the Polo Grounds yesterday it is hard to find comfort. Consider the case of Larry French, clever lefthander who had a no-hit game to his credit until the ninth inning arrived. Larry saw his club make two runs in the tenth and it looked like curtains for the Giants, but they fought back to a deadlock in the tenth and then won out in the eleventh on Jackson's homer. The score was 3 to 2.

The same Stonewall Jackson, whose great baseball career was thought by many to be nearing a close last season, rose in his might to win the closing game as he smacked another homer that brought the Giants a 1 to 0 triumph. Ralph Birkofer was the pitching victim of the second mound classic of the day. Carl Hubbell was the slab hero.

French and Hal Schumacher set a new style for the season's game in the National League as they swapped punches in the first clash. The two sturdy hurlers ran off seven frames without allowing a hit. With one out in the eighth, Tom Padden reached Schumacher for a single to center and in the ninth Traynor singled with two out.

TERRY HITS DOUBLE

French retired Shumacher to start the last half of the ninth, but Moore dropped a single in center. With two out, Terry doubled, but Moore had to hold third, and Lavagetto threw out Ott as the game rolled into even frames.

Suhr started the tenth with a single and after Lavagetto flied out, Jensen singled, sending Suhr to third. Padden drew a pass, filling the bases. French hit to Terry, who touched the bag and then tried for a double play at the plate, but his shot was wild and Suhr scored. L. Waner beat out a hit to score Jensen.

Lavagetto dropped Jackson's pop fly as the Giants opened the tenth. Peel singled to send Jackson to third. Vergez, batting for Ryan forced Peel, as Jackson scored. Mancuso walked and Danning batted for Shumacher. The pinch man singled to score Vergez. With runners on third and first, French fanned Moore and stopped Critz. Two were out in the home half of the eleventh when Jackson hit into the right field stands to end the game.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: RETURN OF THE DERELICT—In the latter part of the nineteenth century, during the heydey of sailing vessels, the schooner Wire G. Sargent, built in Sargentville, Me., and named after the owner, hit a storm off the Virginia Capes and was so battered about by the sea that she had her masts torn away, became waterlogged and was abandoned. The entire cargo was pine lumber. Subsequently the staunch little vessel drifted across the Atlantic and was sighted near the coast of Spain. After several years she drifted back to American shores again, her soft wood cargo still holding her afloat, although the decks were awash. The owners finally towed the derelict to port, refitted it throughout and used the same vessel in coastwise trade for many years.

BARNEY SCORES BRILLIANT WIN OVER M'LARNIN

By BILL CORUM
International News Service.

NEW YORK, May 29.—He beat Jimmy McLarnin with a smile and he will gladly try to do it again any time his managers say . . . That's Barney Ross, of Chicago, lightweight and welterweight champion of the world, and still growing.

The new welterweight king sat on the side of his rubbing table in his dressing room at the Madison Square Garden Bowl, in Long Island City last night, and looked out with eyes that were unafraid and unmarked, for more worlds to conquer.

But he'd better be careful. If he keeps sweeping through classes the way he has swept through the last two, there'll be no fighters left for him to meet. No more worlds to conquer.

He was a great fighter under that big silver moon that hung over the Garden Bowl last night, was Barney Ross—greater than any that had ever gone before. Or so the records will insist. For never in the long history of the ring had a lightweight titleholder succeeded in going out of his class to topple the welter king in the resin of defeat.

WINS WITH A SMILE

And little Barney, born on the East Side of New York and raised on the West Side of Chicago, did it with a smile. True, there were rounds when that smile was little more than a crimson smear against the white of his mouthpiece, but it was there. From beginning to end and from bell to bell, and as I scored the fight, he won all the way.

Kid-like in his dressing room, he said:

"Gee, I hated to miss the opening of the World Fair today."

"You should worry, kid. You put on your own World Fair out there before 60,000 people tonight."

This from his manager, Art Winch.

And there was none about who would or could deny that Winch had spoken truth and nothing but. Through 15 as fast and savage rounds of fighting as any fan would want to see, Ross had outboxed, outfought and outlasted one of the great little men of our time—James Archibald McLarnin.

JIMMY STILL GOOD

Oh, don't think for a minute that McLarnin was disgraced. That he couldn't still fight and didn't. That age and ring rustiness beat him. They didn't. All that beat him was Barney Ross, and you can put that in capitals if you wish.

That was the story of this fight beyond shadow of doubt, and although one judge saw things so obliquely as to declare McLarnin the winner, the sounder judgment of another judge and Referee Eddie Forbes saved the ring a resounding scandal and possibly riotous scenes. Ross won all the way—fairly, squarely, decisively.

A left hook coming somewhere near the end of the bout did dust Ross' trunks with resin. This would have been the first knockdown of his career if it had been a knockdown, but Barney claims he slipped, and I'm inclined to think he did. Not that the punch wasn't decisive enough to drop

ROSS SUSPENDED

NEW YORK, May 29.—(AP.)—Edward C. Foster, president of the National Boxing Association, announced today he had suspended Barney Ross, lightweight and new welterweight champion, for failure to honor a contract to box Tony Herrera in Fort Worth, Tex., which will be lifted if he goes through with the bout.

MEMORY TEST

TODAY'S QUESTIONS

How good is your memory of sports events, heroes and dates? Can you answer these questions?

1—How long was the run for a touchdown from kickoff made by Jimmy De Hart, of Pitt, against Navy in 1915?

2—Which member of the Big Three won the first collegiate football championship and when?

3—When did boxing have its inception in the United States?

4—Name the famous American boxer who won the world bantamweight championship and never was defeated.

5—How long did Gene Tunney box, and what was his record?

FIELD OF 33 RACERS TO START IN INDIANAPOLIS CLASSIC

PETILLO WINS POLE POSITION FOR GRIND

INDIANAPOLIS, May 29.—(AP.)—A starting field of 33 cars was assured today for the twenty-second annual 500-mile race to be run tomorrow over the Indianapolis motor speedway course.

The time trials were completed late yesterday afternoon and the rail birds went home to roost until race day. The course will be closed today so that workmen can put the huge plant in shape for the speed spectacle that each year lures within the gates a throng of more than 100,000 thrill seekers.

Thirty-one gasoline cars and two propelled by oil burning engines comprise the field for the classic. In accordance with speedway rules, all of the contestants have demonstrated during the time trials that their cars are capable of averaging over 100 miles per hour.

In the pole position, a place he earned by making the fastest time on the first day of the qualifying runs, will be Kelly Petillo, diminutive Californian. Petillo's average for the 25-mile run was 119.329 miles per hour and was the fastest speed recorded during the qualification runs.

The starting field follows:

First row—Kelly Petillo, Los Angeles; Wilbur Shaw, Indianapolis; Frank Brisko, Milwaukee.

Second—Mauri Rose, Dayton; Chet Gardner, Long Beach, Cal.; Phil (Red) Shafer, Des Moines, Ia.

Third—Tony Gulliota, Kansas City; Al Miller, Detroit; Russell Snowberger, Philadelphia.

Fourth—"Wild Bill" Cummings, Indianapolis; Ralph Hepburn, Los Angeles; George Barringer, Houston, Tex.

Fifth—Louis Meyer, South Gate, Cal.; Herbert Ardinger, Pittsburgh, Pa.; William (Shorty) Cantlon, Detroit.

Sixth—George Bailey, Detroit; Al Gordon, Long Beach, Cal.; Cliff Bergere, Los Angeles.

Seventh—A. B. (Deacon) Lits, DuBois, Pa.; Lou Moore, Los Angeles; John Sawyer, Milwaukee.

Eighth—Dave Evans, Columbus, Ind.; Rex Mays, Los Angeles; Joe Russo, Kenosha, Wis.

Ninth—Herb (Dusty) Fahrnow, Indianapolis; George (Doc) McKenzie, Eddington, Pa.; Rick Decker, Staten Island, N. Y.

Tenth—Charles Crawford, Chattanooga, Tenn.; "Stubby" Stubblefield, Harry McQuinn, Indianapolis.

Eleventh—Eugene Haustein, Detroit; Chet Miller, Detroit; Johnny Seymour, Los Angeles.

CITY LEAGUE NINES BUSY

The Homewood-Brushton club meets the Mt. Oliver tossers at the Homewood Playgrounds this evening in the feature game of the City League, and while these outfits are battling, Books, defending champions, go to McKinley Park to meet Beltzhoover, and Dormont travels to the Salt Works to tackle the Vaughans.

The Duquesne University Informals will be the attraction at Pleasant Valley Field this evening, meeting the Ottie Cochran club.

In the City League's long contest last evening, Beltzhoover defeated Mt. Oliver, 12 to 9, at Frederick Field, Mt. Oliver. The Homestead Grays defeated the Kensington team of Philadelphia, 4 to 0, and the Crawfords nosed out the Bachrach Giants in a National Negro League battle at Greenlee Field, 3 to 2.

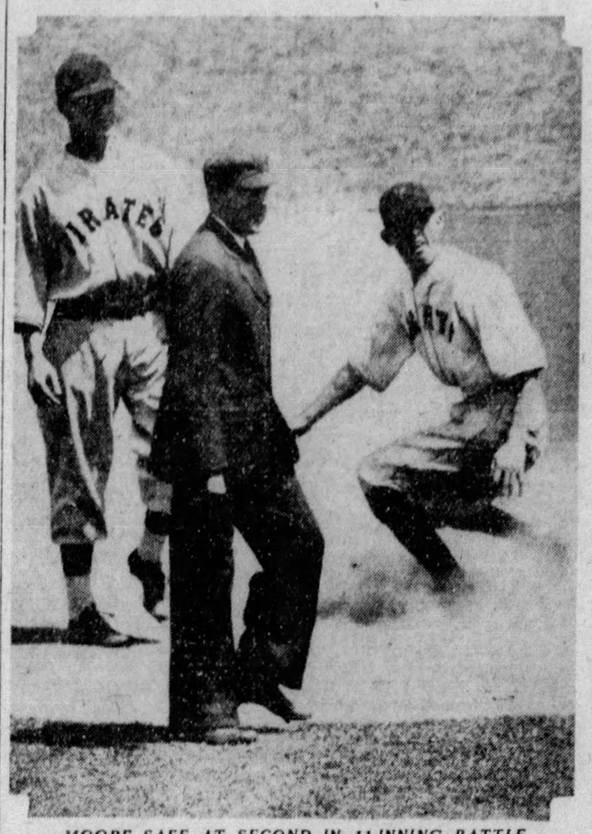
Bucs Lose Tough 'Uns



MOORE SAFE AT SECOND IN 11-INNING BATTLE

The Pirates lost two tough games to the Giants in New York yesterday, the first in 11 innings, 3-2, and the second, 1-0. Travis Jackson's two homers decided both games, bitterly fought pitching duels. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

Ross, Double Champion, Hailed as Fistic Wonder

any ordinary lightweight, but Ross is no ordinary lightweight. Or welterweight, either.

He took harder smacks than that without tumbling, and it is only fair to give him the benefit of doubt—and also McLarnin—and say that both fighters slipped and were down in this round, for hardly was Ross up than it was Jim who had his foot in the air.

A GREAT VICTORY

Yes, sir, there was no taint whatsoever on the young man's triumph. He's a real double champion, and, like double cream, he's very, very good.

It was a great win for him in every way. The shadows of Sid Terris, Ruby Goldstein, Al Singer, Kid Kaplin and other Jewish fighters, whom McLarnin had knocked out and practically ruined, must have been dancing back of Barney through the long, tough battle. It was the first time a Jewish fighter ever had beaten McLarnen in a New York ring.

As for McLarnin, the night started wrong for him and finished the same way. Even old Pop Foster, his manager, who is usually so calm and cool, must have had a brain storm before coming out to the stadium. Anyhow, Jim's helpers came away from their hotel without his famous green bathrobe, his shoes, his mouthpiece and other fighting equipment. They had to send all the way back for them and even on the second trip they still left his slippers, so that Jim was walking about his dressing room in his bare feet.

NO SQUAWK FROM LOSER

This was not calculated to improve McLarnin's mental condition, and, to make matters worse, Pop forgot again and sent him out for the fourteenth round—a critical one—without his mouthpiece. But all these things were minor compared to that machine-like rat-a-tat Ross played on Jim's early bleeding nose with a brisk and busy left, and hefty right he continually crossed in the fierce flurries that marked the bitter struggle.

Jim's nose still was dripping blood after he had finished his shower and he had to keep asking his trainer for a towel. He said ruefully:

"When you forget to duck this is what happens. You have to pay for it through the nose."

I asked:

"Did you think you'd won, Jimmy?"

He replied:

"I wouldn't like to say."

"Would you fight him again?"

"I'd like nothing better."

Pop was not so sure. Nor was he quite certain that his Jimmy ever would fight again.

A FINE DECISION

Pop thought McLarnin had won the fight. That's how confidence and deep interest in those we love blinds us to the facts. Even McLarnin's own dad, I'm sure, thought there was no question about the justice of the decision. And, game old gentlemen that he is, Papa McLarnin was one of the first in the ring after the fight to comfort his son and congratulate the jubilant winner.

They're all right—the McLarnins. But last night the Ross was the better man.

So once more—a great fight and a fine decision.

Ross said he'd fight McLarnen again any time. He said he'd win easier in a second meeting.

Here's the box score on how the judges and referee voted:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	15

O'Rourke—Even 5, Ross 1; McLarnin 9.

Approximately 60,000 fans paid $225,000 in round figures for the battle, of which McLarnin received 40 per cent, Ross 25 per cent and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's Milk Fund 10 per cent.

CHICAGO CELEBRATES

CHICAGO, May 29.—(INS.)—Chicago's famed Maxwell street district, where Barney Ross was reared as Bernard Rosofsky until he took to the ring, was proud of the new world welterweight champion today.

His followers in the old neighborhood have seen Barney step into the lightweight championship and the junior - welterweight championship, but his bout with the veteran titleholder, Jimmy McLarnin, last night in New York, attracted as much or more interest here as any of Ross' previous major bouts. There was loud rejoicing when Barney defeated the Vancouver veteran to annex his third championship.

British, French Netters Advance

PARIS, May 29.—(AP.)—Margaret Scriven, of England, the defending champion, today gained the semi-finals of the French women's hard-court tennis championship by defeating Nancy Lyle, a compatriot, 6-1, 6-1. Mme. Rene Mathieu, ranking Frenchwoman, also advanced to the round before the final. She defeated Lucia Valerio, of Spain, 6-3, 6-2.

Mme. Howard Metaxa and Mlle. C. Rosambert defeated Mrs. Molesworth and Joan Hartigan, 6-2, 6-1, to qualify to meet Helen Jacobs and Sarah Palfrey, American combination, in the women's doubles quarter-finals.

After a shaky start, Jack Crawford, of Australia, hit his stride and overhauled G. P. Hughes, of England, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3, to gain the round of eight in the men's championship.

Sport Shorts

Burleigh Grimes, veteran spitball pitcher recently released by the St. Louis Cardinals, has been signed by the New York Yankees.

Ellsworth Vines, of Pasadena, won the eastern professional tennis championship yesterday at New York when he defeated Martin Plaa, of France, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4. He previously had defeated Bill Tilden and Henri Cochet.

Sea Finn rewarded a lone backer with $191.60 to place and $22.40 to show in the first race at the Charles Town (W. Va.) track yesterday.

The Pacific Coast Conference hereafter will select the western representative for the Tournament of Roses football game at Pasadena. The decision to relieve the Tournament of Roses committee of this duty was reached at a conference meeting yesterday at Portland, Ore.

The local All-Ireland Athletic Club football team, exponent of the Gaelic type of the grid sport, will oppose Cleveland there on June 10 in the first game of a home-and-home series. The date for the Clevelanders' appearance here has not yet been set. An eastern team will come here for a game on Irish Day, to be observed on June 23.

LUTHER WINS THIRD OAKLAND BEACH TITLE

By TOM BIRKS
Staff Correspondent.

CONNEAUT LAKE, Pa., May 29.—Matching his skill against a select group of professionals from the tri-state district and Cleveland, Ted Luther, popular professional of the Valley Heights Country Club, set a new record by bagging his third Oakland Beach open title here yesterday.

The big fellow shot a 72-69-141 to lead the field by four shots. His 69 tied the course record set a few years ago by Fred Baroni while pro at the course.

Reggie Myles, of the Hawthorne Valley Country Club, of Cleveland, was second with 145, and Sam Parks, Jr., of the South Hills Country Club, finished third with 147. In setting his record, Luther never shot better golf since coming to this district. He matched par on the morning round, and his 69 in the afternoon attracted a large gallery.

After the morning round, Johnny Malutic, of Youngstown, a youngster, was leading the field with a sub par 70. Bob Randall, of Cleveland, and Luther were bracketed at 72. In the afternoon, Malutic blew up.

CENTRAL AHEAD

The Central Catholic High School golf team defeated Bellevue, 11 to 4, at Stanton Heights yesterday in the final match of the season.

Honus Says:

By HONUS WAGNER
Former Star, Now Coach of the Pirates.

To the Sports Editor:

Every once in a while I bump into a former ball player who is settled down in the city in which he used to play. And they still say that chance doesn't govern our lives a lot! If these players had played on a different team they would be settled down in that city, have an entire new set of friends and maybe be in different business. And a lot of them wouldn't have met the girls who became their wives. I think we haven't as much control of our lives as most of us to think.

SCHOOL TENNIS TITLE WON BY SHADY SIDE

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Shady Side Academy's crack racquet band, coached by Harris Haviland and captained by Jimmy Arensberg, reigns supremely over all it surveys in the district preparatory and high school realm. Already boasting the Tri-State Prep League title by virtue of a Saturday triumph over University School of Cleveland, the Fox Chapelites yesterday added to their honors the considerably more important Interscholastic Tennis Conference crown, carrying with it the secondary school team title of Allegheny County.

The Academy stars annexed conference laurels through an impressive 4-1 triumph over Mt. Lebanon, defending premier, in intersectional series final on Pitt's Trees Field courts. Not only does the verdict bring to the winners' trophy room for the coming year the University of Pittsburgh plaque, but it also deprives the Lebanon lads, for at least another twelvemonth, of permanent possession of the coveted victory symbol, which they had copped in 1932 and 1933 for two of the three legs requisite for retirement of the award.

SINGLES

James Arensberg, Shady Side, defeated Paul DeJohn, Mt. Lebanon, 6-2, 6-2; Allerton Miller, Shady Side, defeated William Fay, Mt. Lebanon, 6-2, 6-1; Dick Sunstein, Shady Side, defeated Robert Bald, Mt. Lebanon, 6-4, 6-1.

DOUBLES

Arensburg and Miller, Shady Side, defeated Paul Wick and DeJohn, Mt. Lebanon, 6-3, 9-7; Fay and Robert Bald, Mt. Lebanon, defeated Sunstein and High Moor, Shady Side, 6-3, 6-4.

Motorboat Races At New Kensington

Pittsburgh district fans will geet a preliminary taste of what they may expect on a larger scale in the Hearst Gold Cup motorboat regattta when the New Kensington Boat Club stages a series of outboard races as part of the Memorial Day sports program tomorrow. Many of the district drivers will tune up their craft in these events for the sanctioned meet at Oakmont under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and the Oakmont Boat Club on Saturday and Sunday, July 14-15.

One Policy

To make a pure motor fuel—which gives high-powered, knockless, streamline performance in any car, whether new or old; and still sell it at the same price as ordinary gasolines. That is the Sun Oil Company's one all-important policy.

One Grade

Our one and only motor fuel, Blue Sunoco, is outstanding in every gasoline quality—fast in acceleration, high in knockless power, smooth in performance, economical in mileage, uniform and pure—yet sells at regular gas price.

One Price

Since we make only one first-grade motor fuel — not two or three grades — great economies are effected in the refineries and warehouses, in the number of delivery trucks and gas pumps. That is why we are able to sell our one — and only — high-grade Blue Sunoco at regular gas price.

By making only one motor fuel we are able to sell this unique, brilliant Blue Sunoco at regular gas price

SAM PARKS TO LEAD LOCAL GOLFERS INTO ACTION IN OPEN

DISTRICT STARS TO BE LATE STARTERS

Sam Parks, Jr., professional at the South Hills Country Club, who turned in the best score in the Pittsburgh district qualifying test, will lead the local delegation into action in the National Open golf tournament at the Merion Cricket Club, Ardmore, Pa., on Thursday of next week, the pairings and starting times for the event, announced today by the United States Golf Association, reveal. Parks is to tee off at 10:40 a. m. in company with Guy Paulson, of Fort Wayne, Ind.

In the matter of drawing playing partners, Charley Manning, of Shannopin, and Albert Alcroft, of Youngstown, appear to have met with the greatest success. Manning is paired with Johnny Revolta, of Milwaukee, and Alcroft with Ky Laffon, of Denver. Revolta and Laffoon are regarded as two of the leading lights in the ranks of younger professionals.

LOCALS BUNCHED

Ted Luther, of Valley Heights, accompanied by D. J. Armstrong, of Aurora, Ill., is to tee off at 11:15 a. m. Emil Loeffler, of Oakmont, paired with Mel Shorey, of Silver Spring, Md., will answer the starter's call at 1 o'clock. Within a span of 15 minutes, from 1:30 to 1:45 p. m., Rader Jewett, of Elm Grove, W. Va., Vincent Eldred, of Highland, and Manning will leave the initial tee. Jewett is paired with Ralph S. Miner, of Bethlehem, N. H., and Eldred with Charles MacAndrew, of West Newton, Mass. Alcroft and Laffoon are to tee off at 2:30 p. m., just 10 minutes ahead of the big field's last pair.

Two of the tourney's prime favorites, Paul Runyan and Gene Sarazen, have been paired, and there is little doubt but that most of the gallery will be in their wake when they get away at 2:05 p. m. Johnny Goodman, defending titleholder, is to tee off just ahead of Parks, and W. Lawson Little, Jr., who last week won the British amateur title, is to accompany Phil Perkins off the tee at 10:10 a. m.

STARS ARE PAIRED

Other combinations of famous players produced by the pairings are MacDonald Smith and Ed Dudley, Walter Hagen and Wiffy Cox, Leo Diegel and Bobby Cruickshank, Gus Moreland and Billy Burke and Craig Wood and George Von Elm.

The starting times are to be reversed for the second day of play, and the early starters of Thursday will be the late starters of Friday.

Douds Named Softball Deputy for South Hills

Brashear Director Reports Lively Interest

By PHILIP GRABOWSKI
Softball Tournament Secretary.

A fourth district deputy commissioner has been named for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's big amateur softball tournament, which gets under way June 10 and entries for which close on Friday.

He is Harold L. Douds, athletic director of the Brashear Settlement, on the South Side. He will have charge of the entire South Side and South Hills district.

Douds is a graduate of Eastern Kentucky State College, where he was a letter man in football, baseball, basketball and track. He prepped at Munhall High School. Before going to the Brashear Settlement he was coach of the junior high school athletes at Ellsworth High School.

Douds reports growing interest in the softball tournament in his district, with many of the mushball teams showing an inclination to turn toward the new game, which is more like baseball in that an inseam ball is used, permitting of surer handling of the sphere. The speed of the new game also has caught the eyes of the players.

Listed among the latest entrants in the tournament are the Llyswen Methodist team, of Altoona, James Miller, manager; East Liberty Shamrocks, Charles Reed, manager; Champion Coal, of Library, Lloyd Matheas, manager; West Kittanning Lumber, of Kittanning, Guy Woodring, manager, and C. J. Walls, of the North Side, C. J. Wall, manager.

SEEDED NET STARS WIN IN MEET

The Memorial Day tennis card for the Pittsburgh district offers unusually attractive competition with second-round play in the third annual Stanton Heights invitation men's singles tournament comprising the feature bill. Provided this evening's program of five contests is cleaned up without revision, there will be seven frays, all of them worthy of note, on the holiday list.

Seven tilts were disposed of as hostilities got under way late yesterday. Straight-set victories were bagged by Wally Arensberg, Frank Broida, Frank Smith, Stan McCaskey, Paul Barber, Northwestern Pennsylvania premier in 1932, and Bob Lampus, Belmont leader. A lone default saw Bob Madden, Pitt freshman boss, ease on by withdrawal of Karl Wolfe.

The summary:
First round, upper half—Walter Arensberg defeated W. J. Clardy, 6-1, 6-4; Frank S. Smith defeated L. M. Tichvinsky, 6-1, 6-2; Stan McCaskey defeated Neal O. Rumsey, 6-1, 6-4; Paul Barber defeated J. G. Allen, 6-0, 6-1.
Lower half—Robert T. Lampus defeated Robert Caffee, 6-2, 6-3; Robert Madden won from Karl G. Wolfe by default; Frank Broida defeated H. M. Rinehart, 6-4, 7-5.

Lineup for Cup Net Play Changed

NEW YORK, May 20.—(AP.)—Sidney B. Wood, Jr., fair-haired New York tennis star, has been substituted for Frank X. Shields, top-ranking American, on the United States team which will play Mexico in the final North American zone Davis Cup series beginning tomorrow at Baltimore, the United States Lawn Tennis Association announced today.

Wood will play in the singles with Lester R. Stoefen. The doubles assignment was given to George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago, and John Van Ryn, of Phidelphia. The cup committee explained that Wood was substituted for Shields in order that he might have an opportunity to play in actual Davis Cup competition.

GREEN LUCKY IN VICTORY OVER PILC

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Anson Green, the Black Thunderbolt, of Homestead, didn't do much thunderbolting at Hickey Park, Millvale, last night and was lucky to come off with a split and howled-at referee's decision over Johnny Pilc, a small, half-bald fighting taxicab driver from New York. The crowd by its hooting when the verdict was announced made it very plain that it didn't think Green had won.

Perhaps the fact that Pilc wound up with his left eye completely closed and his right eye cut underneath had something to do with the split decision against him after he had piled up a big lead going into the last two rounds. Judge Jock Simco voted for Pilc and Judge Bud Smith and Referee Red Robinson for Green.

Pilc, a veteran campaigner, was entirely too ringwise for Green and carried the fight to him until he tired in the closing stages. He kept inside and out of trouble and never once was hit with one of Green's heavy blows. There never was a time when he was in danger and he gave Anson some very anxious moments, several times doubling him up with his drilling punches to the body.

Pilc won the first two rounds, was shaded in the next three, came back to win the following three, the sixth by a wide margin, and then tired and bowed to Green's stronger finish in the last two.

It was a discouraging battle for Green, who is trying to fight his way to recognition as a challenger of Ted Yarosz.

Harry Weekly was leading Johnny Durso until he suffered a cut eye in the fifth round of the scheduled six-round semi-final and the referee halted the bout and awarded it to Durso on a technical knockout. Al Quaill laced, but couldn't knock out, Frankie Kladdick, making his professional debut as an eleventh-hour sub for Kid Barry, in the main five-rounder; Ralph Gizzy and Johnny Birek fought to a referee's draw, and Casey Rhodes, Negro southpaw middleweight, conceded almost 10 pounds to Carl Montebano and bested him in the opener.

BOWLERS IN BENEFIT

Charles (Dutch) Hollen, winner of the recent "Best Duckpin Bowler Contest," will meet J. R. McAteer, who finished in the runner-up position in the same tourney, in a benfit duckpin bowling match at 8:30 o'clock tonight at Kittanning. The proceeds will be turned over to a hospital fund.

NINES BATTLE FOR W. P. I. A. L. CROWN

The Edgewood and Burgettstown High School baseball teams clash at Forbes Field this afternoon at 4 o'clock, the winner to be acclaimed W. P. I. A. L. champion for the year. Trinity High School, of Washington, Pa., won the crown a year ago.

Edgewood advanced to the final round of the intersectional eliminations by defeating Crafton last week. Burgettstown put out Waynesburg in the semi-finals.

The City League will wind up its campaign today, Westinghouse taking on Peabody in Section I and Oliver meeting South Hills and Langley facing Allegheny Vocational in Section II.

Elimination play for the Interscholastic Golf Conference championship will get under way Thursday. Turtle Creek will meet Connelley and Kiski will take on Sewickley in the opening matches.

STOCKS IN GRIP OF HOLIDAY DULLNESS

NEW YORK, May 29.—(AP.)—Stocks idled through another market of monotony today, and, in the absence of any definite selling urge or buying power, prices drifted over a moderately irregular range.

A few issues got out of the beaten path for relatively substantial gains, but others sagged as much. Board rooms were almost deserted, as most traders apparently had decided to start their Memorial holiday early.

With the leading markets closed tomorrow, scattered profit-taking appeared in various groups. There was also some nervousness exhibited over reports that a renewal of strike disturbances at Toledo is threatened. There were delayed openings in a number of leading stocks. American Telephone did not appear on the ticker tape for more than an hour after the start of the trading.

Commodities were mixed. Grains were off around a cent a bushel at one time as the result of realizing. There was little relief forecast, however, in the drought belt. Cotton was virtually at a standstill. Silver was a trifle higher, but rubber eased. Bonds held up fairly well. Foreign exchanges were about even in terms of the dollar.

Armour of Illinois preferred shares got up around 2 points followwing overnight consideration of the company's reorganization plans. Some of the amusement group moved up on earnings expectations.

While most commentators were encouraged by the quiet and steadier character of the market, brokerage houses were bewailing the lack of business and were disposed to attribute public and professional indifference largely to uncertainties regarding congressional activities, labor troubles and seasonal declines in various lines of industry.

There were many conjectures on the personnel of the commission the President will appoint to carry out the provisions of the new stock exchange regulation bill, which is expected to become a law before the end of the week. Until the makeup of the control board is known, it was felt there could be no idea as to how drastic would be the supervision of speculation.

WHEAT NEARS DOLLAR MARK

CHICAGO, May 29.—Reports that the Russian government was buying wheat and flour in Australia ran Chicago wheat prices suddenly upward late today. The Chicago wheat market jumped to well above yesterday's topmost point, for deferred deliveries.

Accelerating late advances in wheat values were assertions of some trade leaders that drought in this country, if much longer unrelieved, might assume proportions of a national calamity.

Wheat closed irregular at some reaction from the day's maximum, ¼ lower to 1⅛ higher, compared with yesterday's finish: July, 97¼@½; corn, ; off to ⅜ up; oats, ⅝@1¼ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

STIMULATION OF BUSINESS HAS FAILED

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, May 29.—Business activity last week continued the gradual recession, which has been apparent for some time.

The primary cause of this lies in the artificial stimulation which preceded and which consisted chiefly of government spending. "Business" which rests on government doles of one kind or another lasts only as long as the government deals out the dollars.

It has also been learned, we may hope, that effective inflation in the shape of bank credit cannot occur unless conditions are such as to cause a demand for credit.

After pouring out billions of government funds and writing up huge excess reserves on the books of the banks, we now find industrial activity receding. This trend seems likely to continue throughout the summer, unless the President either (1) abandons his New Deal as a program of radical social reform, or (2) makes the last desperate "play" in the way of currency inflation.

Of course, the serious drought in the West is a factor. But that merely emphasizes two points: (1) No idealistic scheme of social reforms or government control can overlook the practical difficulties presented by material forces. (2) If we had not had drought we would have had a serious problem of overproduction.

STEEL SLUMPS

Last week steel production slumped. It now sees that even the ordering for stock (to anticipate higher prices) has been less than supposed, and steel makers look for dull business until fall.

The automobile industry appears to have definitely passed its seasonal peak, and last week the production was curtailed much more than seasonally. Evidently sales have not been up to expectations. The attempt to raise automobile prices in order to pay high ages has failed doubly: It has failed to bring income, and it has failed to satisfy the New Deal ideas of the laborers.

There was a small rise in the adjusted index of railway carloadings, but this was due to an abnormal jump in ore shipments, probably influenced by strike fears.

Trade, on the whole, has continued spotty and backward. Unseasonable weather and strikes have been a factor. But the plain fact is that many prices are high compared with most people's incomes, and more than 10,000,000 are unemployed. Retail trade figures continue to show that the average family is buying smaller quantities of goods.

As to prices, the weekly indexes moved up again. This was entirely due to higher grain prices caused by drought. The more sensitive industrial commodities were lower, including steel scrap.

NEW DEAL FAILS

Thus it seems reasonably clear that the New Dealers' attempts to "prime" the business pump on government credit, have failed. We cannot expect bank credit and private initiative to go to work as long as we continue to subject them to so much uncertainty and to so many restrictions.

The government will either have to run business itself, or let business men do it. That is the problem of the New Dealers right now. Which way will they take? The disorganized condition of NRA, and the President's edict allowing clothes cleaners, etc., to "fly the blue eagle," although charging what they want to for their services, suggests that we may hope for a more realistic policy.

Most of us agree with the ideals of the New Deal. They are as old as the hills. We want social justice, and better conditions for the average man. We hate monopoly, and despise financial manipulation. "Business leaders" deserve much chastisement.

But to attain our ideals we must have practical methods. We are never going to make business and increase employment merely by punishing wrongdoers, or by substituting politics for business.

The Thin Man

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

"We're doing the best we can," Guild said. "Me—just now I'd like to know why, if he didn't do it, Wynant don't come in and answer questions for us."

"One reason might be that Mrs. Jorgensen'd like to slam him in the squirrel cage again." I thought of something. "Herbert Macaulay's working for Wynant; you didn't just take Macaulay's word for it that the man in Allentown wasn't him?"

"No. He was a younger man than Wynant, with damned little gray in his hair and no dye, and he didn't look like the pictures we got." He seemed positive. "You got anything to do the next hour or so?"

"No."

"That's fine." He stood up. "I'll get some of the boys working on these things we been discussing and then maybe me and you will pay some visits."

"Swell," I said, and he went out of the office.

There was a newspaper in his waste basket. I fished it out and turned to the Public Notices columns. Macaulay's advertisement was there:

"Abner. Yes, Bunny."

When Guild returned I asked: "How about Wynant's help, whoever he had working in the shop? Have they been looked up?"

"Uh-huh, but they don't know anything. They was laid off at the end of the week that he went away—there's two of them—and haven't seen him since."

"What were they working on when the shop was closed?"

"Some kind of paint or something—something about a permanent green. I don't know. I'll find out if you want."

"I don't suppose it matters. Is it much of a shop?"

"Looks like a pretty good layout, far as I can tell. You think the shop might have something to do with it?"

"Anything might."

"Uh-huh. Well, let's run along."

Visit Nunheim

"First thing," Guild said as we left his office, "we'll go see Mr. Nunheim. He ought to be home: I told him to stick around till I phoned him."

Mr. Nunheim's home was on the fourth floor of a dark, damp, and smelly building made niosy by the Sixth avenue elevated. Guild knocked on the door.

There were sounds of hurried movement inside, then a voice asked: "Who is it?" The voice was a man's, nasal, somewhat irritable.

Guild said: "John."

The door was hastily opened by a small sallow man of thirty-five or -six whose visible clothes were an undershirt, blue pants, and black silk stockings. "I wasn't expecting you, Lieutenant," he whined. "You said you'd phone." He seemed frightened. His dark eyes were small and set close together; his mouth was wide, thin, and loose; and his nose was peculiarly limber, a long, drooping nose, apparently boneless.

Guild touched my elbow with his hand and we went in. Through an open door to the left an unmade bed could be seen. The room we entered was a livingroom, shabby and dirty, with clothing, newspapers, and dirty dishes sitting around. In an alcove to the right there was a sink and a stove. A woman stood between them holding a sizzling skillet in her hand. She was a big-boned, full-fleshed, red-haired woman of perhaps twenty-eight, handsome in a rather brutal, sloppy way. She wore a rumpled pink kimono and frayed pink mules with lopsided bows on them. She stared sullenly at us.

Offers Whisky

Guild did not introduce me to Nunheim and he paid no attention to the woman. "Sit down," he said, and pushed some clothing out of the way to make a place for himself on an end of the sofa.

I removed part of a newspaper from a rocking-chair and sat down. Since Guild kept his hat on I did the same with mine.

Nunheim went over to the table, where there was about two inches of whisky in a pint bottle and a couple of tumblers, and said: "Have a shot?"

Guild made a face. "Not that stuff. What's the idea of telling me you just knew the Wolf girl by sight?"

"That's all I did, Lieutenant, that's the truth." Twice his eyes slid sidewise towards me and he jerked them back. "Maybe I said hello to her or how are you or something like that when I saw her, but that's all I knew her. That's the truth."

The woman in the alcove laughed, once, derisively, and there was no merriment in her face.

Hurls Skillet

Nunheim twisted himself around to face her. "All right," he told her, his voice shrill with rage, "put your mouth in and I'll pop a tooth out of it."

She swung her arm and let the skillet go at his head. It missed, crashing into the wall. Grease and egg-yolks made fresher stains on wall, floor, and furniture.

He started for her. I did not have to rise to put out a foot and trip him. He tumbled down on the floor. The woman had picked up a paring knife.

"Cut it out," Guild growled. He had not stood up either. "We come here to talk to you, not to watch this rough-house comedy. Get up and behave yourself."

Nunheim got slowly to his feet. "She drives me nuts when she's drinking," he said. "She been ragging me all day." He moved his right hand back and forth. "I think I sprained my wrist."

The woman walked past us without looking at any of us, went into the bedroom and shut the door.

Guild said: "Maybe if you'd quit running around after other women you wouldn't have so much trouble with this one."

"What do you mean, Lieutenant?" Nunheim was surprised and innocent and perhaps pained.

"Julia Wolf."

The little sallow man was indignant now. "That's a lie, Lieutenant. Anybody that say I ever—"

Guild interrupted him by addressing me: "If you want to take a poke at him, I wouldn't stop on account of his bum wrist: he couldn't ever hit hard anyhow."

Miriam Leaves

Nunheim turned to me with both hands out. "I didn't mean you were a liar. I meant maybe somebody made a mistake if they—"

Guild interrupted him again: "You wouldn't've taken her if you could've gotten her?"

Nunheim moistened his lower lip and looked warily at the bedroom door. "Well," he said slowly in a cautiously low voice, "of course she was a classy number. I guess I wouldn't've turned it down."

"But you never tried to make her?"

Nunheim hesitated, then moved his shoulders and said: "You know how it is. A fellow knocking around tries most everything he runs into."

Guild looked sourly at him. "You'd done better to tell me that in the beginning. Where were you the afternoon she was knocked off?"

The little man jumped as if he had been stuck with a pin. "You don't think I had anything to do with that. What would I want to hurt her for?"

"Where were you?"

Nunheim's loose lips twitched nervously. "What day was she—" He broke off as the bedroom door opened.

The big woman came out carrying a suitcase. She had put on street clothes.

"Miriam," Nunheim said.

She stared at him dully and said: "I don't like crooks, and even if I did, I wouldn't like crooks that are stool pigeons, and if I liked crooks that are stool pigeons, I still wouldn't like you." She turned to the outer door.

Guild, catching Nunheim's arm to keep him from following the woman, repeated: "Where were you?"

Can't Remember

Nunheim called: "Miriam, Don't go. I'll behave, I'll do anything. Don't go, Miriam."

She went out and shut the door.

"Let me go," he begged Guild. "Let me bring her back. I can't get along without her. I'll bring her right back and tell you anything you want to know. Let me go. I've got to have her."

Guild said: "Nuts. Sit down." He pushed the little man down in a chair. "We didn't come here to watch you and that broad dance around a maypole. Where were you the afternoon the girl was killed?"

Nunheim put his hands over his face and began to cry.

"Keep on stalling," Guild said, "and I'm going to slap you silly."

I poured some whisky in a tumbler and gave it to Nunheim.

"Thank you, sir, thank you." He drank it, coughed, and brought out a dirty handkerchief to wipe his face with. "I can't remember offhand, Lieutenant," he whined. "Maybe I was over at Charlie's shooting pool, maybe I was here. Miriam would remember if you'll let me go bring her back."

Guild said: "The hell with Miriam. How'd you like to be thrown in the can on account of not remembering?"

"Just give me a minute. I'll remember. I'm not stalling, Lieutenant. You know I always come clean with you. I'm just upset now. Look at my wrist." He held up his right wrist to let us see it was swelling. "Just one minute." He put his hands over his face again.

Guild winked at me and we waited for the little man's memory to work.

Synopsis

Nick Charles, noted detective, who tells the story of "The Thin Man," and Nick's wife, Nora, meet Dorothy Wynant, daughter of a former client, in a speakeasy. Dorothy asks where her father is and Nick refers her to Herbert Macaulay, Wynant's attorney. Macaulay, calls on Nick and tells him Mimi, Wynant's divorced wife, is hunting him.

Next day Nick reads of the murder of Julia Wolf, Wynant's secretary. Mimi found the body when she went to get Wynant's address.

While a Mr. Norman is telephoning to Nick a loud report as of a shot is heard and his words end abruptly.

It is learned Julia was a former sweetheart of a racketeer.

Dorothy appears at Nick's apartment and flashes a gun which she says she got in a speakeasy. She is drunk and Nora puts her to bed. Morelli, a gangster, is suspected in Julia's murder.

Nick is shot by Morelli. Police find Dorothy's automatic in Nick's apartment. Dorothy, beaten by Mimi, seeks shelter at Nick's, and tells new story about gun. Nick and Nora visit Jorgensens', but leave suddenly. Julia served time for working badger game, Guild tells Nick. Wynant's letter urges Nick hunt slayer. Nick gives Gilbert story on cannibalism. Nick talks with Studsy.

Now go on with Charles' narrative.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT'S FIRST TERM—LABOR MEDIATOR—PANAMA CANAL

After President McKinley's death (Sept. 14, 1901) Vice President Theodore Roosevelt became Chief Executive. Important events of his first administration: Adoption of McKinley's policy concerning U. S. Insular Possessions; acquisition of territory and rights for Panama Canal construction, begun by the French Co. of Lesseps in 1881, that stranded (U. S. paid $40,000,000 to the French Co. and $10,000,000 to Panama Republic, besides an annual payment of $250,000); he improved national defense (Army and Navy); established Departments of Commerce and Labor; mediated in the anthracite coal strike of 1902 and created an arbitration commission. He opposed combinations of railroads and other big enterprises as restraint of trade.

Roosevelt's ability and dynamic personality won him a second term in the 1904 election. (U. S. History)

SKYLIGHT IN APARTMENTS—ITS DETERMINING FACTORS

Sunlight is diffused by the air through which it passes, so we receive light from all parts of the sky, the skylight. The visible sky-angle (above) should be at least 5° at any part of the room where we read or write. The amount of light received through the window depends on its size, the nearness and height of adjacent buildings or other obstructions to light. Sky-angle decreases on lower floor, angle of incidence between rays and windowglass decreases too, reducing further the amount of light transmitted. The light may be increased by prismatic glass (above left) which changes direction of light. (Gen. Science)

DISMEMBERMENT OF CHINA — THE DOWAGER EMPRESS—HSUAN TUNG — DR. SUN YAT-SEN

In the Opium War (1842) against China, Great Britain gained Hongkong. The opening of Chinese ports to European nations was soon followed by penetration and annexation: Burma by Great Britain, Indo-China by France, Amur District by Russia; Japanese warred for Korea, annexation of which was frustrated temporarily by other powers.

Above—Cartoon from Punch, characterizing fight of Powers for possessions in China. Center—The Dowager Empress, who fostered the Boxer Rebellion, aimed at expulsion of foreigners; it was subdued by the Powers in 1900. Four-year-old Hsuan Tung, later Pu-Yi, succeeded the Dowager Empress on the throne, only to resign in 1912, when a revolution established the Republic with Dr. Sun Yat-Sen, far sighted, highly educated, as first president of China. THE PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN

". . . With rosy cheeks and flaxen curls,
And sparkling eyes, and teeth like pearls,
Tripping and skipping, run merrily after
The wonderful music, with shouting and laughter. . . ."

This is a beautiful strophe of Robert Browning's (1812-1899) popular poem dealing with the old legend of the town Hamelin. A piper agreed to rid the town of rats in 1284. Fullfilling this, but not paid for, he lured the children by his music to a cave, where they disappeared.

Strikingly original in style and forceful in language, Robert Browning, a strong analyst of the human soul, aside from Tennyson, was the most famous poet of the Victorian Age. (Eng. Liter.)

ORGANIC CHEMISTRY— WOEHLER, A PIONEER

It was believed once, that matter derived from living organism (plants, animals)—called then organic matter—could be formed only by living organism and not synthetically (made artificially from its constituents). Friedrich Woehler, German chemist (above) transformed (1828) ammonium cyanate (inorganic) into urea (organic) by heating. Thus he disproved the old belief and founded the modern organic chemistry, which endeavors to analyse and synthesise carbon-compounds, new definition of organic matter.

Simplest organic compounds are the hydrocarbons, containing only C and H. One series of them, the methane series, has the formula C_nH_{2n+2}, where n is a positive integer. Above table shows some of the lower members. These are found in petroleum, which is mainly a solution of hydrocarbons in each other. They burn completely in air, giving water and CO_2. (Chemistry)

SOME COMMON CONTAGIOUS DISEASES

Infantile Paralysis (Poliomyelitis), inflammation of the gray matter of the spinal cord is caused by a filterable virus not yet made visible. Onset is sudden, with fever, pain on bending neck forward, headaches, nausea, sometimes weakness of muscle groups. After effects: Paralysis of certain muscles (transitory or permanent); that of respiratory muscles may cause death. Patient should be isolated until recovery, at least three weeks.

Whooping Cough (pertussis) is caused by a bacillus like that of influenza, begins like a cold, with fever and cough, worse at night. In two weeks the characteristic, spasmic cough develops, the "whooping" being caused by inhalation through contracted cleft of glottis; sometimes ending with nausea. During spasm, face becomes red, eyes bulge, patient seizes something for support. Often fatal in young children, also in adults, as pneumonia may develop. Isolation, eight weeks. The Old Place Ain't Changed

We've got to tell the truth. Even if it's on margin.

They got us back in the market again.

It's a long lane since 1929. The burned toast dreads the hot oven. But memories are shorter than Eskimo eyelashes.

And like the minnow and the birdseed we looked it over. It didn't look right. But we took a nibble. Curiosity killed the cat. But not before it had kittens. Information brought it to life again.

Time is a great healer. What are you going to do with your surplus? Ben Franklin told us to save our money. The Democrats tell us to spend it. International and Consolidated Hair Curlers looked good to us. We laid a two-dollar diploma on his nose. In the Kentucky Derby the jockey kicks the winner in. Down on The Street the brokers kick the losers out.

Hair Curlers opened at nine and closed at three. Just like the offices. As the Judge said to the banker: "Five to ten."

The banker said: "Are they my hours?"

The Judge said: "No, they're your years." How time flips. It seems that only yesterday was Monday. We watched Hair Curlers swallow itself like a hoop snake. That will be a new expression on The Street tomorrow.

A boy with a bit of chalk started figuring in units. Then he went in for fractions. We were saved by his short reach. He couldn't get past the fifth decimal point.

The broker called up and said: "Shall we give you more information or will you leave like a gentleman?" Then we knew the two bills were gone where the woodbine twineth.

We are looking forward with new zest and slightly repaired hope to 1939. Wall street sees us every five years. That's quite chummy compared with 17-year locusts.

Every five years we stage a one-man parade in The Street. They shower us with ticker tape. Only the trans-Atlantic fliers get equal attention. It's fun to be fooled. But it's more fun to find out.

Hair Curlers was controlled by a big Western syndicate. The hoss was hitched on the back of the wagon. They pulled the plug.

We can put you in something soft. It's the mud on the Mississippi Delta.

The best thing about our information is that it is cheerfully refunded.

A Subsidy for Courage

Federal Aid for Home Modernization Promises to Stimulate Business Recovery.

President Roosevelt, in his admirable message to Congress on home modernization, recognized that the problem of recovery in this country centers around the laggard heavy industries.

The executive's plan for home construction and repairs is a sensible effort to follow through on the public works activity with an enlargement of private spending in the building trades.

Once the government has primed the pump, the hope for continued activity on a normal scale lies in private spending and private investment.

To break down the existing inertia, Mr. Roosevelt proposes that the federal government appropriate funds to guarantee up to a stated percentage the capital loans which lenders put out.

This insurance feature, which will also be applied to building and loan associations, is intended to awaken money-lenders to the fact that their own self-interest calls for renewed venturesomeness, rather than sitting tight.

The advantage of the scheme lies in the fact that employment thus generated will not be limited to the actual outlay of federal funds.

Each dollar of federal appropriation will be used to coax into useful employment numerous dollars of private funds. The plan has been well conceived and Congress should forthwith appropriate the three hundred million dollars sought by the President for mortgage insurance and for facilitating the financing of home modernization, repair and new construction.

It is practical because it is based on an astute recognition of the basic fact that new mortgage money is still scarce—and that lenders are still infinitely timid.

The insurance proposal is an effort to break down fear, and to endow courage and the spirit of adventure.

Under this program, the unmatched federal credit is to be intelligently employed to induce home owners, builders and mortgage lenders to begin to behave normally again.

On existing homes, the federal government will guarantee new mortgages up to 60 per cent of the currently appraised value, and on newly built homes up to 80 per cent of the appraised value.

It will also foster the creation of new mortgage associations to provide cheap, long-term financing.

The whole plan is excellent.

It is an especial boon to the building trades, which should have the intelligence to take full advantage of it.

Capital and labor in the building trades should get together, and recognize candidly that relatively high building costs have thus far discouraged a revival in the building trades.

They should devise ways and means of making the new building dollar go further through improved technology and heightened efficiency in operations.

Once the American people turn earnestly to remaking their dwelling places, the backbone of the depression will have been unmistakably broken.

Home building and home modernization will create a whole new spiral of activities—throughout the home furnishings trade.

That there is an underlying human need for re-employment in the home making trades was shown by President Roosevelt, when he boldly and truthfully said:

"Many of our homes are in decadent condition and not fit for human habitation. They need repairing and modernizing to bring them up to the standard of the times. Many new homes are now needed to replace those not worth repairing. The protection of the health and safety of the people demands that this renovising and building be done speedily."

In the light of the President's appraisal, it is a shocking social waste to permit millions of men from the heavy industries to remain without employment when the American people are sorely in need of their creative labor directed to the making of better homes.

Congress should lose no time in enacting the President's proposals for directing capital and labor into the useful channels of improving American homes.

An Abused Perquisite

Officeholders Should Pay Themselves for Junkets Not in the Taxpayers' Interest.

The Pennsylvania Tax Justice League directs attention to an injury which it is said is being inflicted on the public by some of the officeholders' organizations. The charge, if true, calls for remedial action.

The Legislature authorized elected officials of counties, cities, boroughs, townships and school districts to attend conventions of their associations at the public expense. Although the conventions may take on something of the nature of junkets, it was the theory that this getting together of the officials would result in the communication of ideas for the improvement of the public service; consequently it was held to be no more than right that the taxpayers should pay the railroad and hotel bills.

On this supposition there was justification for asking the people to pay the convention bills. But, according to the Tax Justice League, the officials meet not to discuss ways and means of improving the government, but how they can best promote their own selfish and personal interests.

The principal opposition to the modernization of local government, to eliminate wasteful and inefficient methods that have come down to us from oxcart days, issues from these conventions of officeholders, some of whom would lose their jobs if duplication and overlapping were corrected.

Elected municipal officials, through their organizations, have opposed, according to the Tax Justice League, consolidations of administrative units and other proposals designed to take the names of political parasites off the public payroll.

The Tax Justice League plans accordingly to ask the Legislature to repeal the laws which permit the officeholders to attend conventions of their associations at the expense of the citizens.

Certainly it is adding insult to injury for officeholders to get together in an effort to preserve an outworn governmental system that is oppressive to the taxpayers, and then make the taxpayers foot the bills for the meetings.

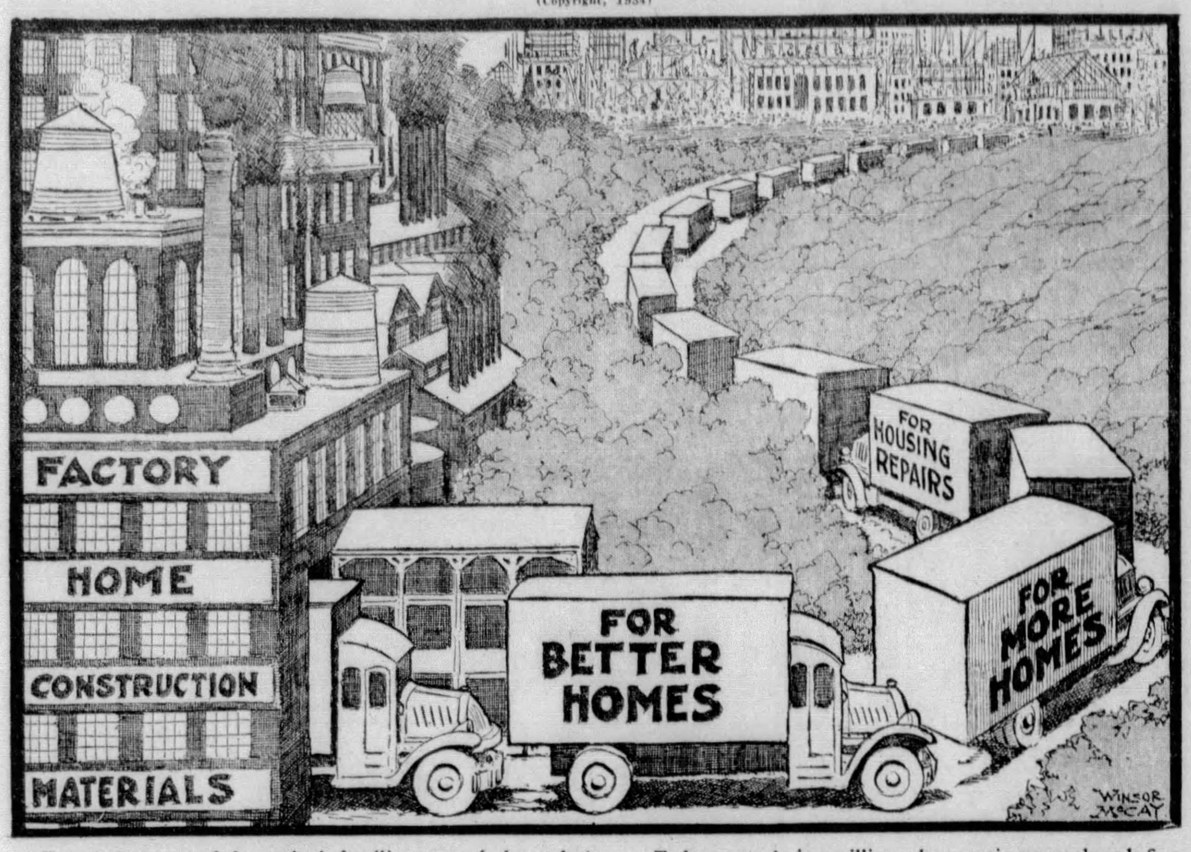
Improved transit facilities.
Modification of "blue law."
Establishment of Pittsburgh metropolitan district.
Voting machines to insure honest elections.
Complete utilization of water resources.
Development of air transportation.
Electrification of railroads.
Fair public utility rates.

Busy at Both Ends

(Copyright, 1934)



Twenty per cent of the nation's families are underhoused.

More than sixty per cent of all dwellings in the country need repairs.

Nearly three per cent of our dwellings are "unfit to live in."

These are facts revealed last week by the Department of Commerce after an official survey.

Yet the housing industries have been and are among the most depressed, according to the Durable Goods Industries Committee.

These durable goods industries in 1932 employed ten million persons.

Today, out of nine million who remain unemployed, five million are from the durable goods industries, of which the construction and building industries form a great part.

Obviously, the federal government's National Housing Bill, and the programs of the Federal Home Loan and Home Mortgage Boards comprise an exceedingly important immediate recovery policy.

The Hearst newspapers and two Hearst magazines, Good Housekeeping and American Architect, have advocated such a comprehensive program for months as a means of putting millions of men to work in factories and in the building trades, improving the standard of living in hundreds of communities, and adding to the nation's permanent wealth.

CALIFORNIA DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

LOS ANGELES, May 29.—Los Angeles' Chinatown is soon to go. Where it sprawled will rise a new union station. And with the slum muck will vanish—or maybe it has gone—that tortuous alley where Chinese girls used to beckon from cribs, a fiercely black contrast to the usual California outdoorsiness.

An interesting foreign quarter is on Olvera street, a sunny slit of old Mexico with sleepy market, post-leaning peons, horse troughs, fat women with head baskets and the usual indifference of chronic languor. Hard by is Japanese town, a nip of Nippon and most squalid of all the Filipino settlement.

There are nearly 7,000 destitute Filipinos in Los Angeles, who may be shipped home any day. They have come from Manila either as ship servants or via sugar plantations to Hawaii. They live a communal life, six or seven to a room and all eating when even one has a job. A strong national tie binds them.

They wear one another's clothes and in jets of prosperity share a broken down car. The Filipino restaurant is depressing with a fly-blown filth. Its food, like life there, forms a thick scum. But one edible a tourist may chance—mangoes frozen in Manila and ready to eat fresh when thawed.

Skirting the settlement are cheap taxi-dance halls where roguishly rouged girls prey on the Filipino in temporary purse. The Filipino gentleman prefers blondes and all temptresses are suspiciously golden. A long, sharpened nail file concealed in the gaudy silk 'kerchief the Filipino dandy always wears in the breast pocket is the favorite and ripping weapon in what a local writer called "amorous sabotage."

The famous Italian restaurant Victor Hugo in downtown Los Angeles has joined the outward sweep to Beverly, where most fine cafes and shops are today. Paul Morand classed it and Moneta's on New York's Mulberry street as the two top Italian cafes in America. En passant, I'd like to swirl a cape to the grand spaghetti at Mona Lisa, whose proprietress actually has Mona's quick smile, the frog legs at the Vendome and to a barbecued sandwich at The Pit near Long Beach, whose oak smoke flavor tingles the delicate after-taste of a London fog.

The theatrical weekly Variety has a smart neon-lighted office on Hollywood boulevard. For Hollywood Variety circulates a daily of thin proportions along with the fatter and national weekly. In the amusement whirligig, chief news for that journal incubates in the studios instead of Broadway. And an older clientele is mostly here.

* * *

I visited Sunny Brooks' ash-gray African parrot last evening. As I walked toward the expansive cage it cocked a quizzical, shakoed head and squawked: "None of the Polly wanna cracker stuff!" The anticipatory warning was timely and I switched to: "How's tricks?" Backing off in pigeon-toed sullenness it countered: "How's your old man?" I bowed aloofly and walked over to inspect a shelf of books. No parrot is going to make a sucker of me in public.

* * *

Unsung wonder-men of the studios are old established technicians. They can snatch almost anything you name instantly from their grab bags of surprises. Calls for an old Roman bridge, a Moulmein pagoda or a chalet teetering on a Tyrolean crag are produced as quickly as one says scat and with no more effort. They have grown up in atmosphere of crazy requests, and nothing stumps them.

* * *

One of the only two other fellows I know to bear the names of Oscar Odd lives in Los Angeles. He is Oscar Odd Young, a cousin, both of us named for his father. The juvenile of the Oscar Odd is a handsome, athletic fellow and a figure in salesmanship. He recognized me from his car while I stood in front of my hotel, stopped, and we discussed days on a Missouri farm when I drove to town in the spring wagon with grandpa proudly carrying always a flowered bit of ceramics brightly labeled "Little Pet!" Two little mugs!

Someone else recognized me along a shady turn in Westlake Park in the later twilight. He loomed out of a clump of shrubbery with "Hi, young squirrel!" I bowed stiffly in the best the-sheriff-is-here Park avenue mode. "No high hand-shaking," he said. "We used to live in the same Cincinnati leanto, cut each other's hair, and you still owe me $2." All of which was true. Life had jounced him badly. He is what so many have undeservedly become in the world crack-up—a moocher. So he got his two-spot with what, for a Scotsman, was fair interest.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Grab It, Kid, While It's Hot!

Life's queer.
You think, when you're a kid, it's going to be like a long story—
Or a play—
With everything arranged in a regular plot—
Everything means something—
Getting somewhere—
With a definite Beginning and Ending.
A BIG PLAY—A LONG STORY—THAT'S WHAT YOU EXPECT LIFE TO BE,
WHEN YOU'RE SEVENTEEN.
AND YOU'RE TERRIBLY IMPATIENT FOR IT TO START.
FOR YOU WANT TO GET SOMEWHERE;
YOU WANT TO AMOUNT TO SOMETHING.
Getting somewhere—amounting to something—
That's your notion of life at seventeen.
And it burns you up to have to wait.
You can't bear the delays and the confusion.
The silly little things that get in your way,
The wasted hours, days, weeks when "nothing happens."
"GOSH, IF SOMETHING WOULD ONLY HAPPEN!"
"IF SOMETHING WOULD ONLY HAPPEN!"
Presently that becomes a sort of refrain,
Beating through your brain, throbbing through your blood.
If something would only happen!
If life would only get started!
If you could only get under way!
But it doesn't—and you don't!
Seconds, minutes, hours, days—
Days, weeks, months, years—
They loiter along;
They crawl and cluster and clot.
Like mud on your heel,
But nothing happens.
NOTHING HAPPENS.
NOTHING MEANS ANYTHING.
NOTHING EVER GETS ANYWHERE.
Maybe the world thinks that something's happening.
Maybe the world thinks you're getting somewhere.
But you know you're not.
Inside, you feel just as you felt at seventeen—
It's still a muddle.
You can't really make head or tail of anything.
Things just happen.
But they don't seem to mean anything.
Nothing starts; nothing ends.
There no sense to it all.
It's like walking, walking, walking
Through slipping sand,
Through clinging mud,
But never getting anywhere.
NEVER . . . GETTING . . . ANYWHERE.
If only the hours would pass!
If only the days and weeks would pass—
The meaningless days and weeks—
And you could get somewhere!
AND THEN, SUDDENLY, THEY HAVE PASSED, AND YOU'RE OLD,
AND IT'S ALL BEHIND YOU!
Life's all behind you.
There aren't any tomorrows.
Or, at best, just one or two.
It's all Yesterday.
And what have you gotten out of it all?
What did life give you, anyway?
What did life give you?
NOTHING YOU EXPECTED!
Never, once, did life run like a story,
Or a play.
Never once did anything Start or Finish neatly or in order.
Never did you see, in one glorious glance, what it was all about,
Nor get a grip on it all.
Instead
YOU JUST HAD MOMENTS—
One short moment at a time—
One small incident at a time—
Without any beginning
Or any ending;
Just a moment—
BUT THAT MOMENT WAS LIFE.
THERE, IN THAT MOMENT, LAY EVERYTHING LIFE HAD TO OFFER!
THERE, IN THAT MOMENT, LAY ALL THE ANSWERS, ALL THE OPPORTUNITIES.
Only a moment—
One moment at a time—
That was all life held.
That was all life offered—
Just one moment!
BUT IF YOU'D HAD THE SENSE TO USE THAT MOMENT,
IF YOU HAD TAKEN ALL THAT MOMENT HELD,
NEITHER LOOKING BACKWARD NOR FORWARD,
JUST USING THAT MOMENT UP TO THE HILT—
YOU WOULDN'T HAVE NEEDED ANYTHING MORE.

Life's like that,
And you might as well face it.
Stop kidding yourself.
Life will never be a story, or a play.
Things will never "get somewhere"—
Start and finish,
Or come out even.
Yesterday? Tomorrow?
They're just pipe dreams!
Only this moment is REAL.
GRAB IT, KID, WHILE IT'S HOT!

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Like Land-Locked Ships

When at the wharf I stand and watch the ships
Take on the cargoes waiting at the shore,
See yawning hold and giant crane that grips
Its load one moment, then swings back for more,
I sense an eagerness to be away.
Its echo sings through every foreign shout;
Both ships and sailors ache for wing and spray.
And open seas to greet them, thrusting out.

A kindred haste throbs sometimes in my breast,
The years' strait shores press close upon my heart.
Too long at anchor chained, too long at rest.
With all my cargo now I would depart.
Like land-locked ship, I would sail back to sea.
Return full-freighted to eternity!

Democratic Leaders May Force League Vote

By James T. Williams, Jr.

UNDER THE whip and lash of Democratic leadership of the Senate, the Committee on Foreign Relations will soon meet to determine whether it should report before adjournment the League Court protocols, with a recommendation for their ratification.

It is generally admitted that ratification of these intricate and obscure engagements cannot be forced before adjournment. In fact, there is no intention of taking them up for serious consideration at this session, even if they should be voted out of committee.

The only purpose of a report before adjournment would seem to be to enable the Democratic leadership of the Senate to make friendly gesture toward American membership in the League of Nations.

Ratification of the League Court protocols would put the United States into the League Court. And as the court is the judicial organ of the league, American membership in the court would inevitably mean American entanglement with the league.

To report the court protocols to the Senate before adjournment would indicate that the Committee on Foreign Relations was unwilling to take the time to weigh the evidence on both sides of the vital question raised by the proposal to tie up the United States with the League by American membership in the League Court.

Testimony Not Yet Printed

THE EVIDENCE was submitted at two hearings recently held by the Committee on Foreign Relations. At the first of these hearings, advocates of American entrance into the court presented their arguments in favor of ratification. At the second hearing, the opponents of ratification gave their testimony. These hearings have not yet been printed. Not even the members of the committee have been afforded the opportunity, as yet, to read the record of either hearing. Even after the hearings are printed, it will take the members of the committee far more time and patience than they can spare between now and adjournment "to read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" the evidence on both sides and the opposing argument.

Under these circumstances, the resolve of the Democratic leadership of the Senate to force the Committee on Foreign Relations to vote these protocals out before adjourment can only be explained on the ground of politics, but it cannot be excused on the ground of politics.

Partisanship Ends At Water's Edge

THERE IS AN American sentiment, old-fashioned if you please, but still cherished by all sorts and conditions of true Americans. This sentiment has long found expression in the saying that among Americans "party lines end at the water's edge."

In harmony with this sentiment was the presidential practice of earlier years of never inviting the majority of members of the Committee on Foreign Relations to a White House conference without including in the invitation representatives of the minority.

Under the Constitution, no treaty can be ratified without the advice and consent of two-thirds of the senators present. This requirement attests the desire of the framers of the Constitution to discourage division over questions of foreign policy along party lines.

Engagements with foreign countries involve the honor of the government and the people of the United States. To the end that these engagements should be faithfully fulfilled, the framers of the Constitution provided for minority representation in the making of treaties by requiring a two-thirds vote for ratification.

For the Democratic leadership of the Senate to turn its back on traditional practice in this regard and strive to make a partisan issue of the League Court protocols would seem to be unfair to the Committee on Foreign Relations, unworthy of the Senate, and unwise from a party point of view.

Playing party politics with foreign policy is a reckless venture for either political party.

ISN'T IT SO?

The get-rich-quick crowd may get poor even quicker.

A man must be sure he is right, then ask his wife about it.

Most of the women who cry at weddings have been married themselves.

Happy is the man who is skilled in tracing effects up to their causes.

Babies and pianos would make less noise if grown people would let them alone.

Charity begins at home, which makes it all the easier for a man to practice on himself.

Custer's Last Fight May Be Commemorated by a National Museum on the Battlefield

By Edwin C. Hill

IN AN EFFORT to comply with the will of Mrs. George A. Custer, who died recently, patriotic societies in Montana and Wyoming are seeking to establish a national museum on the battlefield of Little Big Horn where her husband, the famous Indian fighter, made his equally famous last stand.

Only the episodes of the Alamo and the Lost Battalion of the Argonne are comparable in our history to the tragedy of June 25, 1876, when five troops of the 7th United States Cavalry were wiped out to the last man by an overwhelming force of Sioux and Cheyenne up there on that little river in Montana.

The widow of their general survived him and the battle for 57 years, and it was her last wish that his accouterments, uniforms, photographs and souvenirs of the frontier wars should be preserved in a museum on the site of the engagement. Custer's Last Fight is a story which will never lose anything in the re-telling.

"Yellow Hair," as the Indians called the dashing cavalryman from his long golden locks, was in command of a part of the force of 2,000 which Gen. Terry was leading against the Sioux and the Cheyenne braves, who had taken to the warpath. The trouble had been started by Sitting Bull, a medicine man of the Sioux, who was known in his own tribe as "a great coward and liar with a big head and little heart." There exists even today a widespread belief that Sitting Bull led the Indians. The fact is that he was no warrior at all, but was back with the squaws, while Chief Gall and Crazy Horse and Rain-in-the-Face did the fighting.

Did Not Intend Pitched Battle

TERRY SENT Custer ahead to locate the Indians and while his instructions were not definite, it does appear that he did not intend that the small force of cavalry should risk a pitched battle. But coming upon the enemy, the impetuous Custer paid no heed to the warnings of his Indian scouts and prepared for the attack. He divided his force into three parts, sending Maj. Reno across the river to attack from the rear, leaving Capt. Benteen on his left and behind with the pack train because of the hilly country, while he himself with 207 men made the frontal attack. Reno was repulsed, driven back across the river and forced to entrench on the bluffs.

The full force of the 5,000 frenzied warriors was turned upon Custer, and only Capt. Myles Keogh's horse, Comanche, was left alive. And only Custer, in deference to his bravery, was left unscalped.

The news of the battle came to Mrs. Custer in most remarkable fashion. Two hundred miles from Little Big Horn on that afternoon of June 25, Gen. George Crook walked into the tent of the friendly Sioux scouts who were attached to his cavalry unit. Crook had a mighty influence with the redmen, so much so that he had initiated him into their "Soldier Lodge," a most exclusive secret body. But on this occasion there was silence and sullenness for the white man. Puzzled in the extreme, Crook returned to his own tent and sent for the chief of the scouts.

"Indian Telegraph" Mystifies Crook

IT WAS NOT until he invoked the fellowship of the Soldier Lodge that he got the Indian to speak. And the words of the Sioux were these:

"Yellow Hair Custer and all his soldiers were killed on the Little Big Horn this morning."

Gen. Crook believed, even he marveled at the information. It was utterly impossible to conceive how this Sioux was able to tell him what had taken place but three hours before and 200 miles away. No relay of horsemen had carried the news. He would have known if such had been the case, and, on the other hand, it would have been humanly impossible for the couriers to bridge the road-distract of mountains and plains within such a short period of time.

But Crook knew, if he could not explain, the mysterious means of communication among the Indian men which the whites of the frontier called "the Indian Telegraph." The Sioux scout would tell Crook no more, perhaps he could not. However, he had told enough to prompt the general to dispatch a courier to the far away Union Pacific Railroad with a telegram to Mrs. Custer informing her of the tragedy.

White markers in the hills of Montana show today where Custer made his last stand and the bodies of the men of the 7th Cavalry lie in the Custer National Cemetery. The two-edged Toledo saber of their commander is in the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, and carved on it in Spanish is the epitaph of "Yellow Hair:"

"Do not sheathe me without honor."

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Usually the first rift in the matrimonial voyage of young couples comes as the result of financial conditions.

Most brides have worked for salaries.

With money at their disposal they have not had to account to anyone for every cent spent.

It's mighty hard for them to get accustomed to asking anyone for money and they resent being asked to make an accounting.

Young husbands would not stand for anything of this sort were the situation reversed.

Why do they feel that their wives should not became resentful when hampered by such a procedure?

Girls should give careful consideration to the fact that when they marry and give up their positions, they will be minus a salary.

They should expect to be more economical than they were in their money-earning days.

There must be more self-denial when two persons formerly commanding separate incomes are compelled to live on one pay envelope.

There should be a joint bank account or a liberal allowance from the husband in proportion to his salary.
